13 HURT, 3 MAY DIE, IN STRIKE BATTLES; SIEGE IN BAYONNE

RIOTERS SET A DEADLINE

Armed Sentinels Turn Back All Who Seek to Approach Four Big Plants.

MORE THAN 6,000 MADE IDLE

Two Encounters with Firearms Mark the Day, and More Serious Trouble Is Feared.

Striking employes of the Standard Oil Company, armed with revolvers, rifles, and clubs, patroled the streets of the Constable Hook section of Bayonne, N. J., last night, unmolested by the police, with whom they had engaged earlier in battles that ended with the wounding of four policemen and nine strikers, three of the latter so seriously that they may die. East of Avenue F, where the strikers established a guard line, they held uncontested possession of Bayonne's streets, though Police Inspector Cady, six Lieutenants, and ninety-eight men, ten of them armed with repeating rifles, were quartered in Fire Engine House 4, hemmed between this guard line and the Kill van Kull, the narrow waterway separating Bayonne from Staten Island.

In Police Headquarters, outside that district, Director of Public Safety Henry Wilson and Chief of Police Michael F. Reilly scoffed at suggestions that they might call on the militia for aid or on Sheriff Eugene F. Kinkead, who ended the strike of last year after rioting had caused the death of six men. They insisted that the police controlled the situation, but it was a control that did no more than keep the strikers away from the Standard Oil plant, the Tide Water Oil plant, the General Chemical Works, and the buildings of the International Nickel Company. More than this the police did not even try to do, for, although his shrill blasts on a police whistle attracted their attention to him, the whole force of police watched but stood inactive, while Thomas Rose, chauffeur of a United States mail motor truck, was held up by a mob of 1,000 strikers at Avenue F and Twenty-first Street and forced to turn back.

Strikers Establish Siege.

The strikers, elated by their initial success, announced late last night that they had decided to shut off the whole of Constable Hook, thus causing idleness, if not strikes, at the Tide Water chemical and nickel works, and declared that no one would be permitted to pass into or out of that district. Armed men were posted at the intersections of all streets to hold up any one who attempted to cross the deadline.

Among these guards were men who had taken part in two conflicts with the police earlier in the day. The first of these came in the morning when a crowd of strikers tried to rush the gate of the Tide Water Company in East Twenty-second Street.

Inspector Cady and his men charged them, and from the rear of the crowd someone fired a shot. It had come from some distance, for it was a spent ball that struck Policeman Michael Cushing in the left chest. It was deflected by his shield, but cut through his coat and inflicted a flesh wound. The strikers fled, and the policemen returned to the engine house opposite the Tidewater entrance, only to be called out again at 3 o'clock, when between 1,500 and 2,000 strikers overturned a flat car of the Lehigh Valley Railroad across the trolley tracks in Twenty-second Street.

Again the police charged, and this time the strikers met them with a volley. Three policemen were shot, and then Inspector Cady, who had cautioned his men against using their rifles or revolvers without sufficient provocation, gave the order to shoot. A fusilade of bullets flew into the crowd of strikers, and when the smoke cleared the whole throng were seen racing for the safety of Avenue F. Only one volley was fired, and again the police retired to the engine house. There it was found that Policeman Daniel Harris had been shot in the back, though his wound was only a flesh cut; Policeman Robert O'Connor had a bullet in one foot, and Policeman William Lockley one in the left forearm.

Two Badly Wounded.

A telephone call brought Police Surgeon John Connolley in his automobile. The strikers jeered at him, but let him proceed, and after dressing the wounds of the policemen, he suggested that they be carried in boats of the Standard Oil Company to some other part of Bayonne, fearing to permit them to be carried through the streets to the Bayonne Hospital. This was done, and they had no more than arrived at the hospital than the strikers began to bring in their wounded.

William Skarensky of 85 East Twenty-first Street had a bullet through the lungs and Joseph Conti of 40 West Twenty-fifth Street had been shot in the abdomen. Doctors said both probably would die though they operated on them at once. David Martin of 38 Cottage Avenue had a bullet in the right arm, Thomas Howdar of 179 Avenue F had been shot through the chest, and was said to be in critical condition, and John Rada of 201 Avenue F, and Wadislaw Robkensky of 149½ Prospect Avenue had flesh wounds. Ignatz Movinsky of 83 East Twenty-first Street, Frank Wolf of 36 West Twenty-eighth Street, and Lawrence Byrnes of 46 East Sixteenth Street had lacerations of their scalps and faces where bits of

Skippers Report U-Boat In Southern Waters

Special to The New York Times.

SAVANNAH, Ga., Oct. 10.—A submarine, nationality unknown, presumably German, hovers off Martin's Industry Light, about thirty miles north of Tybee Island, watching the mouth of the Savannah River, where a dozen ships are now loading, according to information received by the harbor master and customs officials today.

Two reports were received at the office of the harbor master that such a submarine had been sighted, while another, which customs officials say was entirely unofficial, was received at the Customs House..

The wireless operator on the American steamship Minnesotan, which cleared early in the morning for New York and anchored off Quarantine, caught a message during the night which said that a submarine of unknown nationality had been sighted in the neighborhood of Martin's Industry Light. It is understood that the same message was picked up by other vessels within a radius of a hundred miles.

STRIKE IN THE TUBE VOTED BY TRAINMEN

A WALKOUT LIKELY TODAY

Involves All Conductors, Collectors, and Guards—Will Be No Tie-up, President Fisk Says.

A strike of the conductors, collectors, and guards of the Hudson & Manhattan Railroad, employed in the tubes between New York City and New Jersey, was voted last night, and will probably go into effect this morning. The vote was taken by the men who are members of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, one of the four railroad brotherhoods. Their decision was to strike at the call of their officers because of the refusal of the railroad company to reinstate thirty-two employes who had been dismissed, it was said, because they had joined the labor organization. There are 297 employed in the three classes of workers affected.

The strike, if it attains the proportions predicted by the leaders, would impose inconvenience on many thousands of persons using the tube daily; but W. C. Fisk, President of the company, said last night he did not expect trains to be tied up.

"We are fully prepared to maintain regular service," he said. "I don't believe the public will suffer the slightest inconvenience. Our motormen are satisfied, and, as long as they stand by us, we will run our trains on regular schedule. Our motormen are members of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and have an agreement with us which does not expire until the Spring of 1919."

The vote to strike at the call of their officers was taken by the service employes after President Fisk of the railroad and G. W. W. Hanger, Commissioner of the United States Board of Mediation and Conciliation, had had a second futile conference on the threatened walkout.

It was announced last night that union Chairmen of Pennsylvania Railroad employes would meet in the Herald Square Hotel this morning to discuss the situation, possibly with the view of extending assistance to the trainmen.

BERLIN IS CONFIDENT U-53 OBSERVED RULES

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Oct. 11.—As if by mutual consent, all the afternoon papers refrain from any comment on the new submarine war, contenting themselves with merely reproducing some rather sensational telegrams from Washington and other American cities about the latest U-boat operations in West Atlantic waters. They also reproduce The Associated Press statement, according to which Secretary Daniels informed President Wilson the German submarines had thus far adhered strictly to international law.

In fact, so far as the German press is concerned, there is no such thing as a new submarine war. There is not one line indicating that the much-talked-of new policy has been put in operation, as might be supposed in America.

Only the Vossische Zeitung has a short reference in connection with its reports on the work of the Budget Committee of the Reichstag. Remarking that some factions would probably insist upon going over the whole territory of the committee's discussions in the plenary session of the Reichstag, the paper says that in that case the question of submarine warfare would be only delicately touched upon in accordance with the interests of the Fatherland.

It is impossible to ascertain from the authorities anything regarding the submarine war in American waters, the number or extent of operations of the craft engaged.

BERLIN, Oct. 10, (via London, Wednesday, Oct. 11.)—A semi-official news agency prints a dispatch about the sinking of the Stephano, and says:

"In view of the circumstances, there could have been no torpedoing or sinking without warning. On the contrary, the vessel was unquestionably stopped by the U-53 according to the rules governing cruiser warfare, captured, and sunk because it was impossible to bring her to port, after the safety of the passengers and crew had been provided for."

BROOKLYN DOWNS RED SOX IN FIRST CONTEST AT HOME

Tide of World's Series Turns as Robins Win by 4 to 3 at Familiar Ebbets Field.

STANDS FAR FROM FULL

Game, Too, Has Less Thrills Than on Monday, but Wild Enthusiasm Follows Victory.

COOMBS STOLID AT START

In 7th, However, He Falters, and Pfeffer Stops Boston's Rally from Developing Into Defeat.

It was not so much the way they did it as what they did that boomed the Brooklyn Superbas' world's series stock yesterday. What they did was to place to their own account one of those one-run margin games, turning back the Red Sox juggernaut in its third assault upon the prestige and prowess of the Clan Ebbets. The way they did it was by substracting only 25 per cent. of the spice from their gingery game of Monday's Boston matinee, while the dish that Chief Carrigan set forth was minus at least 40 per cent. of its previous seasoning.

Nevertheless and notwithstanding, the gratifying result is that the toes of Robinson are now planted on the heels of Carrigan, and that one more step in a dance will line up the contending squads on even terms.

Almost any ball game would pale in comparison with the fiery battle fought in the second game of the series. Therefore, it is not unduly belittling yesterday's encounter to rate it as decidedly inferior in interest and merit to its immediate predecessor. Yet lots of people liked it much better—and among them must be numbered pretty nearly everybody who was at Ebbets Field yesterday. No better evidence of this could be adduced than the gyrations of joy indulged in all over the spacious greensward at the game's close by thousands of dancing, yelling, leaping fans, who swarmed from stands and bleachers as Stengel's fingers closed on Lewis's fly for the final put-out, and moved in grotesque parade about the field. One detachment of this brigade encountered a disgruntled group of Boston rooters, and there was a lively interchange of pleasantries, which included not only words but an occasional straw cushion. The invading band from the Hub, outargued but not convinced, fell back upon the intrenchments at the rear of the stand.

Coombs Has Range of Red Sox.

General Robinson ordered the veteran siege gun Jack Coombs into action yesterday, and he had the range of the plate down very fine. His head and his arm were working in good accord. In five innings he allowed only four scattered hits. In the sixth a three-bagger and a single greeted his efforts, and it began to appear that the Red Sox were doing a little range-finding on their own account. Then in the seventh, when Gardner's slash kited over the right-field fence, and Boston had all but devoured Brooklyn's early gained lead, Robinson "seen his duty and done it" with firmness and dispatch. Coombs retired from the heat of battle and Jeff Pfeffer entered the engagement.

Pfeffer has been through a few heated skirmishes himself. He is no squab, nor is he a broiler. Yet no steel-muscled youth with abounding vitality and supernatural skill could have been a more deadly Lord High Executioner of Boston aspirations than was Jeff. Eight men faced him in two and two-thirds innings, and eight men turned sadly back to the dugout, casting despairing glances toward first base, where they would so gladly have dispelled the loneliness of Daubert.

Carl Mays, who boasts a peculiar side-arm delivery, which seems to send the ball plateward from a region midway between his knees and his hips, was nominated by Brigadier Carrigan to lead the Red Sox attack under an alien sky. Seven hits in five innings constituted Brooklyn's harvest from Mr. Mays's slants, and several of them came at times when they counted heavily. George Foster thereupon took up the burden. The Brooklynites had no trouble in whacking Foster's offerings, but most of their blows drove into waiting hands. They got a hit to an inning, but did no further scoring.

Boston Crowds Are Larger.

It was no such crowd as Boston has been turning out that saw the third game of the world's series. The rigid rules of space would have forbidden, anyhow, since Braves Field can accommodate—although accommodate hardly seems the word—nearly twice as many persons as Ebbets Field. There was plenty of room, and some to spare, however, for such as desired to enter the Flatbush inclosure yesterday. It may have been the two defeats, it may have been the prices, it may have been business cares—whatever it was, the cruel fact is that there were many valuable vacant seats. That is, they would have been valuable if they hadn't been vacant.

The crowd was large in numbers, nevertheless—about 21,000—and also large in purpose. Its purpose was—and it never seemed to fear that that purpose would be foiled—to see "a regular ball team show up that bunch of lucky blokes from Boston." The spectators had no particular desire to watch anybody practice or to see anybody parade or to listen to the Boston rooters' war song "Tessie." What they wanted was that Hank O'Day should call the convention to order and open the proceedings of the

Prosperity Blocked Way of Hughes in Maryland

Special to The New York Times.

It had been intended to run the Hughes special from Hagerstown, Md., to Baltimore over the Western Maryland Railroad. The plan fell through. The reason was that the Western Maryland was up to its ears in work handling freight and was so busy looking out for the welfare of the products of that section that it was difficult to arrange a schedule for the Hughes train without interrupting the freight traffic. So the campaign special went over the Baltimore & Ohio from Hagerstown to Baltimore.

SAYS RIDDER WROTE SPEECH FOR HUGHES

SHOWS PART OF A LETTER

Philadelphia Speech on British Mail Seizures Said to Have Come from Staats-Zeitung Editor.

Norman Hapgood, Acting Chairman of the Woodrow Wilson Independent League, made the flat charge yesterday that Charles E. Hughes had reached an understanding with leading German-Americans regarding his attitude upon the question of British interference with American mails and that Mr. Hughes had "made good" his agreement to denounce such interference in his speech at Philadelphia on Monday.

To substantiate his charge Mr. Hapgood made public part of a letter written to him on Sept. 16 by a Western State Senator, which told in detail of an inter view the Senator said he had had on the same day with Victor Ridder of the New Yorker Staats-Zeitung. In this interview Mr. Ridder was quoted as intimating that Mr. Hughes would deliver a speech, written by Mr. Ridder, defining just what Mr. Hughes would do regarding the British seizure of American mails if he were elected President.

Mr. Hapgood refused to make known the name of the Senator, but he said this was because he had not obtained his informant's consent. He added that he had telegraphed to him, asking that his name be used. The nearest Mr. Hapgood would come to identifying his informant was a statement that he was a State Senator from the Middle West and was well known politically. Mr. Hapgood said this man was of German ancestry, but was working hard for the re-election of President Wilson.

Mr. Hapgood told how, in discussing the political situation generally with the Senator, the latter had talked at length of the German-American antipathy to Wilson, and said that he would go down to the office of the Staats-Zeitung and put the whole proposition up to Victor Ridder.

Mr. Hapgood at the University Club last night read from a letter written by the Senator concerning this alleged conference as follows:

"I have just returned from a fiery interview with my good friend Mr. Victor Ridder, at the Staats Zietung office. He holds that German-Americans are the best Americans, that they are not pro-English; that the German-Americans don't care what the President has done or may do to Germany, if he would only protect us against the English blockade and compel our mails to be forwarded quickly.

"He said that the contentions were not necessarily that the English might not censor mail at all, but that it should be forwarded promptly and its delivery assured, or not be censored at all. I said: 'But what will Mr. Hughes do? Why doesn't he say something? All you fellows are following Teddy's man, and Teddy curses you black and blue, and you call Hughes your friend. Hughes is afraid to say anything about anything.'

"That was too much, and he (Ridder) blurted out: 'What would you say if Mr. Hughes should deliver a speech written by me saying if he is elected he will compel our mails to be delivered, or he will take whatever steps are necessary to the extent of convoying our mails or carrying them on our warships? What would you say to that?'

"Then I laughed, and he went on: 'Well, you may look for just that. Remember what I tell you. Hughes will make a statement that will show that this is the first time in history that any President ever stirred up race prejudices, and the whole fault is Wilson's. There can be no denying it, either, and the German vote—well, we beat Teddy at Chicago and nominated Hughes anyway.'"

This is all of the letter that Mr. Hapgood would read. It is understood that he sent a copy to President Wilson.

"Carefully refrain from saying that I believed that Mr. Hughes would allow a German editor actually to write a speech for him," said Mr. Hapgood. "I do not believe it, but I did believe at the time—Sept. 16—and I believe now, that it was clear that there was an understanding. Three and a half weeks after this report was made to me there happened just what I believed would happen, and believed it so thoroughly that I gave warning to some of those most concerned.

"The sequence of facts is this declaration by a German editor, the prophecy by me, and three and a half weeks later the event. Anybody is free to judge the meaning for himself."

Mr. Hapgood said that the whole process of reasoning was simple to him.

When the statement was shown to Chairman William R. Willcox of the Republican National Committee, he got into communication with Mr. Hughes, and gave out this statement:

"Mr. Hughes has no agreements. He has been asked repeatedly by many persons holding every shade of opinion in regard to the European war to state his views concerning American rights. He has stated his views comprehensively in his own way and as he thought he ought to state them."

Mr. Ridder seemed to be under the impression last night that Mr. Hapgood had said he [Hapgood] had talked to Mr. Ridder about the matter. He said:

"I never have met Mr. Hapgood. I have never seen him, and would not know him if I saw him. I never had any communication with him on any subject whatever, by mail, telephone, or any other way. I confess I don't know what he is driving at."

HUGHES SAYS NOTHING.

Reserves Comment, Not Having Seen Hapgood Statement.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 10.—Charles E. Hughes said today that he had not seen the statement made by Norman Hapgood in New York today, and therefore would not comment on it.

PRESIDENT AND LANSING CONFER ON NEW ISSUES RAISED BY U-53; GERARD TO TELL OF BERLIN PLANS

ENVOY SCOUTS PEACE TALK

But Is Said to Have Serious Information on U-Boat Peril.

EVADES POINTED QUESTIONS

Keeps Silence on Reports That Submarine Pledge Is Threatened.

SEES LANSING AND HOUSE

James W. Gerard, the American Ambassador to Germany, whose return to the United States has been made the subject in the last two weeks of many sensational rumors having to do with the war, arrived in New York yesterday morning on the Scandinavian-American liner Frederick VIII.

The Ambassador brought no German peace proposals, nor did he bring any official note or other communication from the German Government relative to Germany's reported intention of resuming at an early date ruthless submarine warfare on merchant ships of the Allies and those of neutrals engaged in overseas trade with the Entente nations. But there is ground for saying that the Ambassador did bring information of the most serious character for the consideration of the President concerning the strong pressure being brought on the German Government at home for a resumption of U-boat activity that might involve a repudiation of the pledges given to President Wilson following the destruction of the Lusitania and the Arabic and the attack on the Sussex.

Within a few hours after he landed the Ambassador was in conference with Robert Lansing, Secretary of State, and immediately following that conference the Secretary started for Shadow Lawn to confer with President Wilson.

Count von Bernstorff, the German Ambassador, also was in New York yesterday, but he insisted that the arrival of Ambassador Gerard had nothing to do with his presence in New York. He repeated the statement he made at Shadow Lawn on Monday with reference to the assurances Germany gave with regard to submarine warfare.

"Germany," he said, "has always kept its promises, and always will keep them."

Count Bernstorff and Mr. Gerard are staying at the Ritz-Carlton, but the German Ambassador said late yesterday afternoon that he had no appointment to meet Mr. Gerard.

Lansing Meets Gerard.

Secretary Lansing arrived in New York from Washington within a few hours after Ambassador Gerard landed from the Frederick VIII. The Secretary went to the Biltmore, where he announced to newspaper men that he had no appointment to meet Mr. Gerard. Soon afterward Mr. Lansing went to the home of Colonel E. M. House, the President's confidential adviser, where the Ambassador awaited him.

On his return to the Biltmore Secretary Lansing refused to discuss the subject of his conversation with Ambassador Gerard, his only comment for publication being that "the luncheon was very satisfactory." Beyond this brief allusion to what may prove to be one of the most important conferences held in this country in months, the Secretary of State would not say a word. He started for Shadow Lawn on the 3:42 P. M. train. Ambassador Gerard was just as noncommunicative as his chief regarding the luncheon conference in Colonel House's home.

That Ambassador Gerard comes home "solely to tell of U-boat menace" and to warn the Government that Germany may now be preparing to repudiate the pledges she gave as a result of the American protests over the sinking of the Lusitania, Arabic, and Sussex was the unqualified statement made in The New York World yesterday.

"Mr. Gerard," The World article, which was sent by wireless from the Frederick VIII., read, "is making his first visit to America in three years to report to President [illegible]son in person on a matter vastly more important to America that the subject of peace, important as that is. He comes to describe the heavy black cloud hanging over German-American relations in the form of the submarine menace, which is growing day by day, and which even the most friendly German statesmen agree will break open after election unless the unexpected occurs and peace intervenes.

"Mr. Gerard will report that Germany is nurturing no false hopes or delusions on this point. She does not believe peace is a likelihood or will be a probability for a long time, so she is concerning herself with means of war, ignoring the plans of peace. Therefore it is proper to say the diplomat's visit has to do more with the war and the possibility of our becoming involved than it has to deal with peace through our agency."

The Ambassador's attention was called to the foregoing, and he was asked if he cared to make any comment.

Gerard Makes No Denial.

"You will not find me quoted on any such subject as that," Mr. Gerard re-

Text of Lansing's Reply to the Entente Powers Refusing to Bar Submarines from Our Ports

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—The text of the American memorandum to the Entente Powers replying to their suggestion that belligerent submarines should be excluded from neutral waters is as follows:

Washington, Aug. 31, 1916.

MEMORANDUM.

The Government of the United States has received the identic memoranda of the Governments of France, Great Britain, Russia, and Japan in which neutral Governments are exhorted "to take efficacious measures tending to prevent belligerent submarines, regardless of their use, to avail themselves of neutral waters, roadsteads, and harbors." These Governments point out the facility possessed by such craft to avoid supervision or surveillance or determination of their national character and their power "to do injury that is inherent in their very nature," as well as the "additional facilities" afforded by having at their disposal places where they can rest and replenish their supplies. Apparently on these grounds, the allied Governments hold that "submarine vessels must be excluded from the benefit of the rules heretofore accepted under international law regarding the admission and sojourn of war and merchant vessels in neutral waters, roadsteads, or harbors; any submarine of a belligerent that once enters a neutral harbor must be held there," and therefore the allied Governments "warn neutral powers of the great danger to neutral submarines attending the navigation of waters visited by the submarines of belligerents."

In reply the Government of the United States must express its surprise that there appears to be an endeavor of the allied powers to determine the rule of action governing what they regard as a "novel situation" in respect to the use of submarines in time of war, and to enforce a compliance of that rule, at least in part, by warning neutral powers of the great danger to their submarines in waters that may be visited by belligerent submarines. In the opinion of the Government of the United States, the allied powers have not set forth any circumstance, nor is the Government of the United States at present aware of any circumstances concerning the use of war or merchant submarines which would render the existing rules of international law inapplicable to them. In view of this fact, and of the notice and warning of the allied powers announced in their memoranda under acknowledgment, it is incumbent upon the Government of the United States to notify the Governments of France, Great Britain, Russia, and Japan that, so far as the treatment of either war or merchant submarines in American waters is concerned, the Government of the United States reserves its liberty of action in all respects and will treat such vessels as, in its opinion, becomes the action of a power which may be said to have taken the first steps toward establishing the principles of neutrality, and which for over a century has maintained those principles in the traditional spirit and with the high sense of impartiality in which they were conceived.

In order, however, that there should be no misunderstanding as to the attitude of the United States, the Government of the United States announces to the allied powers that it holds it to be the duty of belligerent powers to distinguish between submarines of neutral and belligerent nationality, and that responsibility for any conflict that may arise between belligerent warships and neutral submarines on account of the neglect of a belligerent to so distinguish between these classes of submarines must rest entirely upon the negligent power. KAISER REFUSED TO DISCUSS PEACE

Said to Have Declined to See Gerard When Conference Was Sought a Month Ago.

WANT NO MEDIATION BY US

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 10.—The Public Ledger will print tomorrow morning the following from its correspondent, William C. Bullitt, who was a fellow-passenger with Ambassador Gerard on board the Frederick VIII.:

I am able to state with absolute certainty that the Ambassador brings no statement of definite peace terms, either from the Kaiser or from the Chancellor or from heads of the Foreign Office. Ambassador Gerard has not seen the Kaiser since his visit to the Great Headquarters last April.

Moreover, I am able to state from German sources that four weeks ago the Kaiser refused to grant to Ambassador Gerard another conference with the council at headquarters for the purpose of discussing Germany's peace terms. That council rules Germany. The Kaiser presides, and at the table sit Generals von Hindenburg and Ludendorff, Chancellor Bethmann Holweg, Admiral Holtzendorff, Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs von Jagow, Secretary of State for the Interior Helfferich, and several of the Kaiser's personal advisers.

When Germany's peace terms are formulated they will be formulated by that council, and the fact that the American Ambassador was not granted a conference at headquarters is alone proof positive that Germany is not considering a move for peace by way of the White House.

Ambassador Gerard had talks with the Chancellor and von Jagow before he left Berlin, but they were merely conversations in which the leaders of the Foreign Office reaffirmed their willingness to talk about peace in the customary unspecific manner, and offered no basis for a peace move by the President. Indeed, great as is the desire for peace in Germany, the leaders of the Foreign Office do not look with favor upon mediation by the President of the United States.

At the present moment Germans, from throne to the stable, believe "the hand of Wilson is the hand of England," and a recent emissary of the President who was sent to convince the German Foreign Office of the President's true neutrality completely failed to shake this belief.

Indeed, at the present moment Germany is thinking a great deal less about peace via the United States than about war with the United States. That is the true reason for the return of Mr. Gerard. The Ambassador's object is to

NOTE OF ALLIES VIEWED AS THREAT

Lansing's Reply a Challenge to Entente's Doctrine Regarding Rights of Submarines.

CARRIES COUNTERWARNING

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—What is regarded as a serious new phase of the controversy growing out of the visits by German submarines, commercial and war, to American waters was emphasized tonight when Frank L. Polk, Acting Secretary of State, made public this Government's reply to the recent memorandum from the Entente Allies, in which they urged this and other neutral countries to take measures to prevent the use of their waters by belligerent submarines

This phase of the controversy grows out of the fact that the Entente Allies have "warned" this country that if German submarines are to be permitted to enter American territorial waters it may bring "grave danger" to our own submarines. The memorandum delivered by the Entente Allies in which this "warning" is given fails to enter into a particular definition of the exact form of danger to which "neutral" submarines will be endangered, but the inference is plain. In official and diplomatic circles here the memorandum is construed as a warning to the United States, and to other neutral nations, that their own submarines are in danger of being fired upon by war vessels of the Entente Allies when navigating waters visited by "belligerent" submarines.

In the American memorandum, made public tonight, and which challenges the novel issues raised by the Entente Allies, surprise is expressed by the State Department that the Entente Powers should endeavor to set up a new rule of international action, not previously sanctioned by international law, and then endeavor to "enforce" acceptance of that rule by warning neutrals that their own submarines might be imperiled in waters visited by belligerent submarines. According to this rule and the warning conveyed by which its acceptance was sought to be enforced, submarines of the American navy traversing waters in the vicinity of the Nantucket Shoals Lightship at the time that the German submarine U-53 was operating there, might have been in danger of attack from warships of the Entente Powers if not plainly distinguished from the German submarines.

Special to The New York Times.

LONG BRANCH, N. J., Oct. 10.—President Wilson and Secretary of State Robert Lansing had a conference tonight at Shadow Lawn, the President's Summer home, which may have an important bearing on the future relations of the United States and Germany.

Mr. Lansing came to Long Branch today in response to an urgent request sent to him by the President yesterday. While no announcement concerning the President's reason for calling Secretary Lansing to Shadow Lawn at this time was made, there was no concealment among those having knowledge of the matter that the President desired to discuss with the Secretary of State the new aspect given to the previous serious differences between the United States and German Governments over submarine warfare by the exploits of the U-53.

Prior to the arrival of Mr. Lansing at Long Branch the President had been studying all the reports received from Washington concerning the activities of the German submarine. Those who saw the President during the day were impressed by the anxiety he showed over the situation. The President, it is understood, had become practically convinced that the U-53 had not given cause in any of her attacks on merchant vessels for a claim on the part of the United States that she had violated the pledges of Berlin that German submarine warfare would be conducted in future in accordance with the well-established rules of international law which had been reiterated and emphasized by the President through the State Department in the course of the delicate negotiations that began in the week following the sinking of the Lusitania.

American naval officers had seen the U-53 doing some of her work of destruction and persons aboard the merchant ships sent to the bottom by the German raider had given testimony as to the manner in which Commander Rose of the submarine went about his business. Judged by what was said here today President Wilson after studying all the information on the subject that had come to him from Washington, found no reason for protest or the adoption of a drastic course toward Germany because of the U-53's operation.

The U-53 had apparently been careful to see that the pledges given by the German Government were adhered to, technically, at least, so as to obviate the chance of serious trouble with the Government of the United States.

New Questions Involved.

It was realized both in Washington and here, however, that President Wilson's anxiety over the exploits of the U-53 arose from broader considerations than the matter of determining whether the German submarine had failed to live up in every respect to the rules which the Berlin Government had promised to observe. As early as yesterday, only twenty-four hours after the U-53 played havoc with shipping bound to and from American ports, the opinion was formed in official circles in Washington that no ground appeared to be afforded for accusing Germany of having violated her solemn pledges.

Officials, however, were inclined to the view that other problems had been brought to the Administration to solve on account of the appearance of a German war submarine in American waters and her resort to the destructive methods which had been confined heretofore to the near vicinity of Europe. One of the questions that arose was whether the United States Government should tolerate having the European war brought to its own shores with all the dangers to American peace and security which such a condition would involve

Another was whether any neutral nation, thousands of miles away from the scene of conflict, could afford to have its commerce menaced, and American men, women and children constantly exposed to the danger of attack on the merchant vessels upon which they had taken passage. As the State Department had reason to know, the appearance of the U-53 in American waters had produced a situation where American warships outside of territorial waters would be in constant jeopardy by reason of the possibility, even likelihood, that they would be mistaken by belligerent cruisers or submarines for enemy vessels and would be exposed to attack.

President Wilson is not known to have expressed his views on these broader aspects of a new turn in the U-boat situation. To these visitors with whom he discussed the matter in anyway he is supposed to have confined his observations to an opinion that he had no reason to believe that the U-53 in sinking merchant ships had violated the pledges of the German Government. The anxiety he showed over the new condition of affairs is attributed to the dangers which he realized lay in the action of the German Government in bringing the war close to these shores.

Secretary Lansing left Washington last night for New York, and came to Long Branch this afternoon. Mrs. Wilson and Miss Helen Woodrow Bones, the President's cousin, were on the same train which brought him here. When the train arrived at the West End station, shortly after 5 o'clock this afternoon, it was met by President Wilson, who greeted the Secretary of State warmly. He then escorted Mrs. Wilson, Miss Bones, and the Secretary to a waiting motor car. The party was driven directly to Shadow Lawn, where Mr. Lansing dined with the President and his family and spent the night. He and the President had ample opportunity after dinner for a conference over the danger of international complications.

Result of Conference Secret.

No person in a position to speak with authority was able to say tonight what conclusion had been reached by the President and the Secretary of State as a result of their discussion of the situation.

Mr. Lansing is believed to share the view of other Washington officials that the U-53 did not go contrary to German pledges in the manner in which she held up and sank merchant ships off Nantucket Shoals Lightship last Sunday. In this view credited to Mr. Lansing he was in accord with the understood position of the President with respect to this particular phase of the situation produced by the U-53's exploits.

Mr. Lansing, however, is known to be firmly of the opinion that the presence of belligerent warships in the near vicinity of the United States coast furnishes an annoyance to this Government which he would like to have remedied if grounds for doing so can be found.

In several notes and informal communications to the British Ambassador in Washington, Secretary Lansing indicated that the United States Government was inclined to be indignant over the manner in which British and French warships exercised supervision over merchant vessels entering and leaving American seaports, and in these he suggested that the position of the Washington Government had always been hostile to permitting action of that character by belligerent warships near the shores of America.

It is not doubted from what has been disclosed as to Secretary Lansing's attitude in this connection that he brought this phase to the attention of the President at their conference tonight. In his notes to the British Ambassador Mr. Lansing contended that the course of British patrolling warships was inconsistent with the treatment which the United States, as a friendly nation, should expect from Great Britain.

Mr. Lansing had also been made aware through notices from the British and French Embassies in Washington that there was danger that American submarines proceeding in and out of harbors guarded by British patrol ships might be mistaken for German submarines, the appearance of which in American waters had been expected by the London and Paris Governments.

It is surmised, therefore, that the President and Mr. Lansing discussed the question whether the presence of a German submarine off the coast of the United States did not increase the danger to American war vessels and afford ground for taking the position that the belligerent Governments owed it to the United States to take measures for keeping the war away from these shores.

Another consideration in the serious problem confronting the United States is found in the effort of a number of prominent Germans, led by Grand Admiral von Tirpitz, former Minister of Marine, to compel the Berlin Government to abandon its pledges to the United States and renew submarine warfare against merchant vessels on a ruthless scale without regard to international consequences. It has been represented that the von Tirpitz policy is gaining such strength in Germany that Chancellor von Bethmann Hollweg and the more conservative element in the Government may be forced to resort to the methods which came within an ace of producing a break in the relations of Germany and the United States.

Valuable information in this connection is expected from James W. Gerard, the American Ambassador at Berlin, who arrived in New York today, and is expected to be invited to confer with the President at Shadow Lawn soon. The understood intention of Mr. Gerard to inform the President that the von Tirpitz coterie has a good chance of overriding the Chancellor on the submarine warfare issue makes the present situation of even greater importance than it assumed through the attacks of U-53 on merchant shipping off the New England Coast.

It is suggested also that the President and the Secretary of State may find it essential to give consideration to the matter of insisting that Germany shall withdraw her submarine or submarines from American waters on account of the interference with the commerce of American ports, the prospect of a naval battle close to the American mainland, the danger of attacks on American naval vessels by belligerent craft on the supposition that they are enemy ships, and the general feeling in the Administration that belligerent Governments which send vessels of war to American waters are not living up to their obligations of friendship toward the United States.

Conference with French Ambassador.

Jules Jusserand, the French Ambassador, came to Shadow Lawn this afternoon for a conference with President Wilson regarding the suppression by Carranza of two foreign banks in Mexico City. Carranza's action has already been made the subject of a formal protest to the Mexican Government by the Governments of Great Britain and France. It was known that these two Governments had called the matter to the attention of the State Department, but it had been denied that Great Britain and France had asked the United States to take any formal action in the matter.

Today's call of the French Ambassador on President Wilson, and his admission that he came here for the purpose of bringing the protest of his Government to the attention of the President, shows that England and France look to the United States to assist them in their effort to remedy the alleged injustice done by Carranza's orders. The Ambassador said that the action of the Carranza Government had virtually resulted in "sequestering" $60,000,000 of French capital, and that he, as the representative of the French nation, felt keenly that the situation was one which should be remedied. The two banks in question are the Banco Nacional, a French institution, and the Banco de Londres y Mexico, a British bank.

William F. McCombs, the New York Democratic Senatorial nominee, who was to have taken luncheon with the President today, was detained by illness. Vance McCormick, Democratic National Chairman, had a brief conference with the President, and announced afterward that "Wilson Day," which is to be observed on Oct. 28, would be celebrated by the President reading a message to a delegation at Shadow Lawn which would be read at the same time to gatherings all over the country.

Saturday of this week is to be Pennsylvania Day at Shadow Lawn. Mr. McCormick said that plans had been made to bring at least five special trains to Long Branch filled with delegations from all parts of Pennsylvania. The Democratic campaign managers hope to make this the largest and most enthusiastic gathering which has yet greeted the President on the lawn of his Summer home.

The President will leave early tomorrow afternoon for Indianapolis, where he will make two speeches on Thursday. The train will make only the regulation brief stops at stations along the route, and he will make no rear platform speeches.

PREDICT NEW NOTE ON PERIL OF PASSENGERS

Washington Questions Whether Placing Them in Lifeboats at Sea Satisfied Our Demands.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—While eagerly awaiting the ultimate result of President Wilson's conference with Secretary of State Lansing, official and diplomatic Washington is endeavoring to discover the most accurate rule for measuring the situation growing out of the operations of the German submarine U-53 off the New England coast.

The lapse of two days since the raid has strengthened the opinion, now pretty generally held in well-informed circles in Washington, that the pivotal issue in the controversy will be the question whether the German undersea boat lived up to the requirement insisted upon by the United States Government, and adhered to in principle, by the German Government, that merchant vessels should not be sunk "without safety to passengers and crew."

Already the Administration is assembling the facts, the best of which will be covered by the reports of the commanders of American torpedo boat destroyers, for the purpose of determining whether the passengers of the Stephano and the other vessels sunk off the Massachusetts coast were placed in open boats on the high seas under circumstances affording absolute certainty that the boats would reach the nearest port.

The question is being seriously raised in official quarters as to whether the place and manner in which the passengers and crews of these vessels were put into open boats will be regarded by this Government as satisfactorily complying with the principle upon which both the American and German Governments had agreed with respect to this phase of the submarine problem. The facts are now being gathered, and upon them will be based the opinion and decision of the President.

From what is disclosed by unofficial narratives by survivors of the time, place, and manner of the removal of the passengers and crew before the vessels were sunk it is believed that the decision of the President and of Secretary Lansing will be in favor of the dispatch of a note to the German Government dealing primarily with "the open-boat" question, and that the vigor of this communication will be regulated by the extent to which it becomes clear or doubtful that the passengers and crew could have been saved if American torpedo-boat destroyers had not been promptly dispatched to the scene.

In any event the belief was held in well-informed quarters tonight that representations would be made by President Wilson to the German Government for the purpose, if for no other reason, point out the necessity of a better understanding concerning what is considered the safety of passengers and crews placed in open boats on the high seas. It is argued that the operations of the U-53 not only offer the opportunity, but that humane considerations point out the necessity of a better definition of the view urged by the American Government, and approved by the German Government in its prior pledges to this Government, that the requirement of safety is not satisfied by merely putting passengers into open boats.

The passengers of the Stephano were placed in open boats, according to statements made by the merchant Captain of that steamer, about forty-two miles from the mainland. Newport was the nearest port. Forty-two miles can hardly be considered a short distance from the mainland for persons placed in open boats. In normal October weather passengers in open boats, unless quickly rescued, would be forced to undergo severe exposure. In rough seas the boats might easily swamp. Even in good weather and smooth seas there is no certainty that persons unused to small boats would all be able to find their way to the shore, or that some of the boats might not drift seaward.

SAW U-53 WATCHING NEAR SCENE OF RAID

Greek Steamship Commander Sighted the German Submarine at 5 A. M. Monday.

Captain Demetrius Cairis of the Greek Line steamship Patris, which arrived yesterday from Piraeus, reported that he sighted the German submarine U-53 at 5 o'clock on Monday morning 185 miles due east of Fire Island Lightship. The submarine tried to signal the Patris with her Morse lamp, but Chief Officer Barbetis and Third Officer Helvas, who were on the bridge of the steamship at the time, could not understand the message, as it was evidently in code and intended for some vessel which the U-boat was expecting to meet.

Captain Cairis said that the commander of the submarine made no attempt to stop the Patris or communicate with the ship after his Morse signals were not answered. A few minutes later the U-boat submerged and was not seen again by the officers of the Patris.

Captain Cairis's report gives the position of the submarine as about eighteen miles east of Nantucket Lightship, which, shipping men contended yesterday, proved that Commander Rose had not started on his homeward journey by 5 o'clock on Monday morning.

At the White Star office it was said that the presence of the German submarines off the coast would not interfere with the sailings of the company's fleet, as the British Admiralty had cabled instructions that ships were to leave on schedule time, lifting the embargo placed on their departure by P. A. S. Franklin on Sunday night.

The Adriatic will leave at noon tomorrow for Liverpool with 40 first class, 100 second class, and 100 third class passengers, among whom there are a number of Americans. Ten first cabin passengers and 25 in the second class canceled their accommodations early yesterday after reading of the German submarine's work off Nantucket Lightship.

The Atlantic Transport liner Minnehaha and the Leyland Line steamship Philadelphia will leave today for London. The Italian steamship San Guglielmo will leave Gravesend Bay early today for Naples.

Other steamships leaving today for European ports are the Idaho, Norwegian, for Rotterdam; St. George, British, for Liverpool; Ross, Norwegian, for Bordeaux; Baendrecht, Dutch, for Barcelona, and the Rawson, Uruguay, for Havre.

French Consul Indignant.

M. Nettement, the French Consul, said yesterday that he could not understand the course of the Administration at Washington in refusing to allow him to send a warning by wireless on Sunday to Captain of the French liner Espagne, telling him of the presence of the German submarine off the Nantucket Lightship.

"I explained that the Espagne had 433 passengers on board," the Consul said, "many of whom were Americans, and their lives would be endangered if the Captain was not warned to avoid Nantucket. In reply I was informed by one of the Government officials in New York that it could not be done because such a message would violate the neutrality laws of the United States which were being strictly observed.

"To me it was fantastical that the German commandant should be allowed to go ashore on Saturday afternoon in Newport and purchase newspapers giving him the movements of the merchant vessels, send telegrams and telephone to his friends and then refuse to permit me to send a warning to save the lives of 433 people coming into port unaware of the danger awaiting them at the gates."

The Consul said that he had forwarded the particulars of the incident to the French Embassy at Washington to take up with the State Department.

Dutch Demand Redress.

AMSTERDAM, (via London,) Oct. 10.—The Dutch press is highly indignant at the sinking of the Holland-America line steamer Bloomersdijk, which, it is declared, was absolutely illegal and contrary to maritime law.

"We ask with astonishment," says the Nieuws van den Dag, "what reason the submarine commander could have for torpedoing a neutral vessel with a neutral cargo for the neutral population of Holland? There was no possibility of a mistake, for the commander of the submarine must have been aware of the character of the vessel, and for that illegal act Germany must be made to pay full compensation."

The Handelsblad demands that the Government send a strong protest to the German Government.

FRENCH SEE POLITICS IN U-53'S ATTACKS

Believe They Were Timed to Aid Chancellor and Affect American Elections.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Oct. 10.—The German submarine exploits off the coast of New England are the leading topic of today's press. The point on which all writers agree is that the United States cannot tolerate this interference with its commerce, which they hold is nothing but the latest form of Germany's blackmail methods to intimidate public opinion on the eve of a Presidential election.

Jean Herbette, in the Echo de Paris, ascribes the large number of victims on the first day to the fact that the attack was a surprise, pointing out that submarine exploits have become very limited in zones where they are known to be present.

"If the proportion of submarine victims among French ships crossing the Mediterranean in 1916 were known," he says, "the public would perhaps be surprised to learn how slight it is. The Government of the United States, attributing to Germany certain scruples which it would have if it were in the latter's place, thought that submarine warfare would not cross the Atlantic." For the first time in a hundred years, the writer continues, the United States has submitted to a sort of blockade, and he says the Kaiser and his Ministers know very well what they are about in harming American interests as much as and more than that of the Allies at the very moment when the Reichstag is about to take decisions. They are satisfying one of the national passions of Germany, he says—hatred of the United States.

The Journal says:

"The desired effect is easily discernible. To furnish striking proof that submarines can extend their blows to America's coasts; that they remain a formidable weapon even within the limits imposed upon them; that, on the other hand, these restrictions deprive Germany of her most efficacious means of combat—does not this illustrate the whole policy pursued for months past by the Germans at Washington? While the exploit of the U-53 emphasizes the importance of the campaign in favor of submarine warfare, Ambassador Gerard is setting out to find President Wilson, who is preparing himself to receive from his electors a reward for his great victory over Germany. What message is the Ambassador bringing? The denial that it is in the nature of a peace feeler has been perhaps put forth with too great emphasis."

The Petit Parisian says:

"The German Government tears up the promises formerly made to President Wilson and demonstrates in American waters its contempt for its signed engagements. Under the pretext of harassing French and British shipping it interferes with the Union's navigation, paralyzes the communications of the republic with Europe and threatens every moment the lives of American citizens traveling from one point of the coast to another."

"Germany is today convinced" says the Gaulois, "that by extending the zone of assassinations to the neighborhood of the American coasts it will arouse in the United States not warlike resentment, but a pacific movement. It imagines that the business men and large trusts, seeing their maritime traffic and consequently also the means of exportation to the Allies paralyzed, will demand that the Government at Washington intervene in favor of peace or bring pressure on England to relax the blockade; and, as the President is about to go up for election, the German Government is confident that he will not hesitate to submit to the influence of the interests he has strong reason to stand in with."

BRITISH GET REPORTS OF U-53'S EXPLOITS

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Oct. 10.—While the Foreign Office is being fully informed by Ambassador Spring-Rice as to the latest developments of the German submarine outbreak in American waters, no official comment is obtainable as yet. A Foreign Office official stated to THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent today that Sir Cecil Spring-Rice made a detailed report on the exploits of the U-53 from the time she popped in at Newport Harbor until she sank British and neutral ships after she got into the Atlantic again. It is also said to have told the part played by other submarines in the raid.

When he was asked if anything in the Ambassador's report indicated a violation of international law, this official said that no comment of that character would be made, at least until the American Government had had time to arrive at its own conclusions. It must not be understood, he said, that the silence of the British Government indicated anything but an earnest desire not to interfere in the slightest way with the deliberations of the American Government. The British Government, he said, had not hinted—no matter what its ideas might be—that the Germans had broken international law.

In reply to questions about printed reports that the British and French Ambassadors had been instructed to confer with the State Department at Washington over the complications arising from the new submarine attacks, he said that these were absolutely untrue; Sir Cecil Spring-Rice and M. Jusserand had been merely urged to report promptly to their respective Governments all developments, and to act jointly in the name of the Allied Governments in getting all information at hand. They had been doing this, and no more.

Spain Bars Submarines.

LONDON, Oct. 10.—The Wireless Press has received word from Madrid by way of Rome that the Spanish Government has issued definite orders prohibiting the revictualing of submarines in Spanish waters. A number of torpedo boats have arrived at Palma and are patroling the Balearic Islands, in the western Mediterranean.

GERARD IS HERE, SCOUTS PEACE TALK

plied, "nor will you find me being quoted on any other such subject."

But the Ambassador did not utter any specific denial that the reason he had come home was to convey such information as referred to to the President. He would not even discuss peace rumors with newspapermen although in conversation with personal friends he assured them that the peace talk was all bosh so far as his return to America was concerned.

"When will you see the President?" Mr. Gerard was asked.

"I do not know at this moment," he answered.

Mr. Gerard intimated that he might return to Berlin very shortly. He said in answer to a question that there were about 3,000 American citizens in Germany, of whom, perhaps, 700 were resident in Berlin.

"Are they all happy?" a youthful reporter asked.

"I have no reason to believe otherwise," the Ambassador answered.

"Will you see the world's series baseball games?" another reporter asked.

"Yes; that's why I came home," the Ambassador replied, laughing.

"Is there really a food shortage in Germany?" was still another question.

"I had plenty to eat," Mr. Gerard answered.

The Frederick VIII., with Ambassador and Mrs. Gerard on board, arrived in Quarantine at 7:30 o'clock yesterday morning, where she was boarded by the committee appointed by Mayor Mitchel to welcome the returning diplomat in the name of the city.

Oscar S. Straus was Chairman of the committee, the other members being Henry Morgenthau, former Ambassador to Turkey; Acting Mayor Robert E. Dowling, Carl L. Schurz, Charles B. Alexander, Dock Commissioner R. A. C. Smith, Godfrey Goldmark, Howard Taylor, Henry L. Stimson, Frank J. Middlebrook, Louis Wiley, Louis Marshall, R. Fulton Cutting, Samuel M. Lindsay, Dudley Field Malone, William H. Edwards, and Martin Vogel.

The Ambassador and Mrs. Gerard transferred at Quarantine from the Frederick VIII. to the police steamer Patrol, on board of which they came to the city. At 8:30 A. M. the formal welcoming exercises took place in the Governor's Room in the City Hall.

Mr. Straus's Welcome.

Mr. Straus made the opening address of welcome, congratulating the Ambassador on his trying work at Berlin, and adding:

"It has been said, and truthfully said, that diplomacy is, for a country, its first line of defense, and that line of defense can best perform its functions when behind it are the other lines of adequate preparation and defense that will make that first line effective and respected. Mr. Ambassador, you and our chief representatives in the capitals of Europe, representatives in Great Britain, Turkey, Belgium, Holland, and without exception, have written a new chapter in the diplomacy of our country, for, aside from representing this country, you have acted as the Ambassadors of the leading belligerent powers, and in every instance our country feels proud that these added and difficult duties have been performed by our representatives in a manner that reflects credit and honor upon that field of humanitarian diplomacy in which America ranks first."

As the official representative of the city Mr. Dowling welcomed the Ambassador.

The Ambassador made a short speech in reply.

Mr. Gerard said that Mrs. Gerard probably would start for Montana in a few days to visit her mother, Mrs. Marcus M. Daly. He did not know, he said, whether or not Mrs. Gerard would accompany him when he returned to Germany.

AVIATORS TO SEEK U-BOAT.

Machines Sent from Halifax on Mother Ship by British.

News was received here last night from a reliable source that in addition to the British and French fast cruisers which are looking for German submarines several large aeroplanes, constructed in this country for the British Government, have been sent from Halifax on a mother ship to make ascents near Nantucket and prosecute the search.

The British Admiralty has given instructions for all merchant vessels in the Atlantic trades to be armed against attack. It is believed that the U-53 will either go north to lay in wait for British transports carrying troops from Canada to England or go south for freighters off the coast of Brazil, where she can get supplies from the German colonies along the coast at Santa Catherina and other places. British officials expect the raider to be heard from first off Galveston or some other Gulf port.

U-53 TEXT OF MEXICAN TAUNT

La Universal Says We Should Use Force with Germany.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 10.—La Universal today prints an editorial regarding the activities of German submarines off the eastern coast of the United States. It is entitled, "The United States Face to Face With Germany and Mexico."

In such a case, it says, the United States must repel force with force and thus defend the right, acting not only for the protection of the lives of its nationals, but demonstrating to the world that it does not exert its power against weak nations alone.

When the Columbus incident occurred, the editorial proceeds, the entire American press asked for intervention. Now that the sinking of merchant vessels menaces the lives of hundreds of American citizens the Government should act energetically, because otherwise Mexicans will be led to believe that the militia and guns of the Americans are used only in demonstrations of force against the weak and not against all nations equally, as justice and right dictate.

Open Letter to New York Merchants

Gentlemen: October 11th, 1916.

It is difficult to understand the reason why so many merchants in this City do not insure the integrity of their "confidential" men!

It is safe to say that in the past five years there have been a great many defaults of "confidential" and "trusted" employes in New York, where actual serious financial embarrassment was experienced by merchants.

Heretofore, some merchants were disinclined to ask old employes and associates to give a bond, for various reasons, but, year by year, our records unmistakably demonstrate that this condition is rapidly disappearing. It should be so! No prudent man will expose himself, his family, his associates and creditors to heavy financial loss, due so many times, not to a deliberate intention of the trusted employe to defraud but to temporarily "borrowing" a large sum of money without consent, to help out some relative or friend who is in need for a short time; then followed by disappointment and efforts to retrieve the loss by speculating, etc., with more "borrowing" of the employer's funds, followed by further disappointment, then bookkeeping manipulation and financial embarrassment to the employer.

A bond creates a strong restraining influence—a moral effect upon all men, and employers owe a duty to every confidential man to strengthen his power to resist temptation, no matter how strong a character such employe appears to be. However, we can bond your employes without their knowledge if it be desired, but, because no moral effect is obtained by this method, an increased premium is charged.

A $50,000 fidelity bond costs $250.00. Can you afford to expose yourself and associates when for such a small sum you can be absolutely protected?

We have paid in claims over fifteen million dollars, and are by far the largest and strongest surety company in the world!

We deal with an average of over eleven defaulters per day. During the year 1915 we received 3,785 claims.

Respectfully yours,

National Surety Company

KAISER REFUSED TO DISCUSS PEACE

discuss with the President the specific steps which may be taken by the United States to keep Germany from beginning again to sink merchant ships without warning. In addition, his wish is to acquaint the President with the details of the inner political struggle between the supporters of von Tirpitz and the supporters of Chancellor Bethman Hollweg—a struggle whose outcome will determine whether or not the United States is to be drawn into the war.

In Berlin one hears on every side the prediction that sinking without warning will be recommenced within the next six months. The supporters of von Tirpitz are certain that they will win before next May.

In American circles in Berlin it is believed that the President should take three steps to avoid the resumption of sinking without warning, and it is my belief that Ambassador Gerard will recommend these steps to the President when he sees him tomorrow.

First, the United States should build at once a fleet of 1,000 aeroplanes and should train at least 2,000 military aviators.

Second, the United States should build and man a fleet of at least 1,000 swift submarine destroyers of the type now used by the British. If the United States had such fleets, the supporters of von Tirpitz could no longer argue, as they can today with some reason, that the United States could do Germany no actual military harm, and Ambassador Gerard and the Chancellor would have a trump to play on the table at the Great Headquarters when the sink-without-warning game is played next time.

The third chief recommendation which I believe Ambassador Gerard will make to the President is that the British be forced at once to stop removing the first-class mail from the steamers which ply between the United States, Holland, Denmark, Norway, and Sweden. And I believe that the Ambassador will go so far as to recommend, in case the British should refuse to allow the passage of the first-class mail, that an auxiliary cruiser of the United States be sent every three weeks to carry the mails to and from Denmark. Such a move by the United States would create a tide of sentiment against sinking without warning. It would prove to the Germans that the United States is not a secret ally of England and would remove some of the edge of Germany's hatred.

Ambassador Gerard refused last night to discuss the story that the Kaiser had declined to see him with regard to any peace terms Germany might have to propose.

"I will not discuss anything," said the Ambassador. "Let them all guess."

SHIPS STILL HELD IN BOSTON.

One Steamer May Come to New York via Cape Cod Canal.

BOSTON, Mass., Oct. 10.—The tie-up of shipping bound from this port for Europe was still noticeable tonight, although no definite word of the whereabouts of the German raider U-53 has been received since the torpedoing of vessels off Nantucket Sunday.

The Kansan, American owned, which was held up by the submarine early Sunday morning and allowed to proceed to this port, cleared last night for Genoa, Italy, with a shipment of horses said to be consigned to the Italian Government, but she was still in the harbor tonight, and no definite time has been set for her departure.

The British steamer Great City, which has been ready to sail since daybreak Monday, was still off the Quarantine Station tonight. The Lord Cromer, another Britisher, with a shipment of horses, wheat, and general merchandise for Liverpool, will be ready to proceed at daylight tomorrow, but may not leave port at that time. The Marengo, of British registry, scheduled to sail for Hull, England, via New York, probably will leave here tomorrow. By passing through the Cape Cod Canal it is believed that she could keep within the three-mile limit for virtually the entire distance.

The sailing tonight of the Prince Arthur, of British registry, which plies regularly between this port and Yarmouth, was canceled and the 500 passengers were transferred to the Governor Cobb, an American steamer, which sailed in the Prince Arthur's place.

Friends of the 1,200 passengers on board the White Star liner Canopic, due here Thursday night or Friday morning from Italian ports and the Azores, believe she has been warned of the submarine raid and will alter her course.

Shipping agents here received another scare today when a tugboat Captain reported that he had seen something resembling a U-boat between Boston Light and Minot's Light early this morning. The object was so far away and the light so poor that the Captain was unable to say positively that he had sighted a submarine. Steamboat inspectors gave scant credence to the report.

TWO GERMAN U-BOATS SUNK IN THE ARCTIC

Destroyed by Russian Torpedo Boat After They Had Attacked Murman Coast.

CHRISTIANIA, Monday, Oct. 9, (via London, Oct. 10.)—A Russian torpedo boat yesterday sank two German submarines after the submersibles had attacked the Russian wireless station at Sepnavolak on the Murman coast, according to information received here today from Petrograd. Several persons were killed by the gunfire of the submarines.

Regarding the torpedoing by German submarines of Norwegian steamers in the Arctic Ocean the Norwegian Minister of War said today that the Norwegian Government was on guard to protect mercantile ships, but he added that when these vessels were attacked in the open sea it was impossible to protect them.

LONDON, Oct. 10.—A report that eleven men from the Norwegian steamship Ravn, sunk by a submarine in the Arctic last month, have been rescued, is said by the Exchange Telegraph's Christiania correspondent to have been received by the Norwegian Foreign Office. Four other men perished from exhaustion, and a boat containing five men was lost.

The Norwegian Shipowners' Association has demanded that the Government take measures to protect Norwegian sailors. The association asserts the German statement that the vessels torpedoed in the Arctic carried cargoes for the Russian and British Governments is untrue.

DOUBT U-BOAT SANK A SIXTH STEAMSHIP

DESTROYERS SEARCH AGAIN

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, R. I., Oct. 10.—Eleven thousand square miles of open sea were hunted over today in a vain search for the crew of the steamer Kingston, supposed to have been one of the victims of the German U-boat raids on Sunday, and tonight naval authorities were convinced their hard-sought quarry was a phantom ship.

Eleven destroyers of the United States Navy's torpedo flotilla pressed the search. Last night Rear Admiral Albert Gleaves, commander of the flotilla, recalled the seekers and announced that their work was completed, since word had come that the Kingston's (or Kingstonian's) crew had been saved by a passing freighter and was being taken to New York. Early this morning it was learned that theinformation was erroneous, and the eleven capable-looking dark-gray craft went churning back to their work as rapidly as their fast-spun propellers could drive them.

Naval authorities tonight weighed all their evidence concerning the rampage of the U-53 and applied their logic, guided by their knowledge of the sea, to the problem of the missing Kingston. One of the first facts to crystallize out of their reasoning was the similarity between "Kingston" and "Knudsen"—important in the light of the fact that the Knudsen actually was sunk and her crew actually was rescued. Rear Admiral Austin Knight, commandant of the Training Station, called attention to the readiness with which the two names might have been confounded in the radiogram.

Not the faintest whisper of an appearance of the U-53 or any other alien submarine was heard here today. Whether that meant the raider was in hiding close to a supply ship, or that she had started back to Germany, was a question that stirred naval circles with unending debate. The prevailing opinion still was that more would be heard of submarine warfare on this side of the Atlantic.

ROFRANO JURY COMPLETED.

Two Talesmen Follow Osborne and Oppose Capital Punishment.

The jury who will try Michael A. Rofrano, former Deputy Street Cleaning Commissioner, charged with complicity in the murder of Michael Giamari, a political Lieutenant of ex-Sheriff Thomas Foley, was completed late yesterday afternoon before Justice Weeks in the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court.

Two talesmen, Raymond L. O'Neill of 344 West Seventy-second Street, and William Warren of 2,800 Broadway, declared that the recent address of Thomas Mott Osborne, in which he expressed his belief in the innocence of Thomas Bambrick, a gangster, who was put to death on Saturday, had caused them to change their views regarding capital punishment. They were excused. The jury as selected follows:

FRENCH BOMB STUTTGART.

Air Raiders Shell Bosch Magneto Factory and Observe Smoke Arising.

PARIS, Oct. 10.—French aviators in another raid on Stuttgart bombarded the Bosch magneto factory, according to the War Office report issued this evening. Smoke was seen rising from the factory, the report states. The text of the report follows:

> During the night of Oct. 9-10 Adjutant Pilot Baron and Adjutant Chazard bombarded at Stuttgart the Bosch magneto factory. A dense smoke was seen rising from the factory as a result of the bombardment.

The War Situation

BY THE MILITARY EXPERT OF THE NEW YORK TIMES.

While the fighting in the Balkans, particularly that in which Rumania is engaged, has occupied the attention of the public almost exclusively for the last few days, the Russians have been fighting one of the greatest battles they have yet been engaged in. The reports from all sources indicate that this fighting is without parallel on the Russian front. Russia, while claiming no advantages, frankly admits that if this attack or series of attacks fail, it is doubtful whether any further effort will be made in the direction of Lemberg until after the Winter.

Up to a short time ago Brusiloff's strategy ever since the great offensive began on the first of June, was that of the shifting attack. That is, a heavy attack would be launched against one section of the line, drawing all available troops to the point of attack, and as soon as the defense began to stiffen and the advance was checked, another attack in a different quarter would break out, sending the reserve forces hurrying to this point. And so it went from one section of the line to another, until the entire line south of the Pripet marshes had advanced to its present position.

Now we find this strategy changed. All efforts to take Kovel have apparently been abandoned. There is no longer doubt that the main Russian effort is to be made against Lemberg. This was necessitated by the entrance into the war of Rumania, which forced the Russians to localize their attack at a point where it would do the most good to the Rumanian combination. This point is without question Lemberg. Once in Lemberg, the Russians will of course be able to force the retreat of the Teuton line at least back to the Stryj-Grodek line and to make the passage of the Carpathian mountains easier. Once the Carpathians are crossed, von Falkenhayn will be taken in flank, the Germans forced to release the pressure they are now exerting on the Rumanians, and to fall back, abandoning practically all of Transylvania to the Rumanians.

The Rumanian situation in fact is one which is undoubtedly giving the allies not a little uneasiness, and the quickest and most effective way of relieving it is undoubtedly by a Russian success north of the Carpathians. It might be said in passing that it has never been quite clear why Rumania as soon as she entered the war did not send a force of sufficient size, even though it took her entire army, to break the hold of the Teutons in at least one of the passes which traverse the mountains in southern Bukowina, so as to give Russia easy access to Transylvania by a direct route.

Suppose, for instance, that Kirlibaba Pass had been selected. This pass is not far from the Rumanian border, and in the first days of Rumanian activity it is almost certain that a drive northward would have effected a satisfactory juncture with the Russians. By turning the defenders of this pass out of their positions and enabling Russia to pour her troops through and flank the passes further west. Rumania's present difficulties would them have been avoided. for any line the Teutons could have taken in Transylvania east of the line of the Moros Valley would have been outflanked by the Russians in the north. Instead of these we find the point of junction of the two allies at about Dorna-Watra on the Bukowina-Rumanian frontier, too far east to be of any advantage to either of them in the present emergency.

There may have been obstacles of which we are not aware which prevented such a movement against the Carpathian passes. Political considerations in Rumania may have been such that in order to popularize the war among those elements which were hostile to it, it was expedient if not necessary to move directly against Transylvania. This, of course, no one can say. But as matters appear from a study of the situation here, it would seem that such a move would have been the most profitable.

To return from this diversion to the main topic of the present Russian offensive, we see the shifting strategy of Brusiloff undergoing a material change. As his attack gradually centred on Lemberg, the concentration at the main line of attack, that through Halicz, became so great that he could not make an impression on the defense. There was, then, after much fruitless fighting, a cessation of activity, during which preparations were made for a more extended attack. Forces were regrouped, new stores of supplies accumulated, new reserves of ammunition created. Then the present attack was launched.

This attack is coming from three quarters, all more or less dangerous. If at any of these places the German line gives way, an extensive retirement is bound to follow. These three sections are, beginning in the north, that front between the Lemberg-Brody railroad and Vladimir-Volynski; that section of the front which centres at Brzezany, and the front along the Dneister with Halicz as the objective in the immediate front.

A success along the first will of itself throw this right wing of the Russians so far to the west of the centre, that the Teutonic armies will be flanked out. If the advance along the Brody road reaches the junction at Krasne, an important and necessary Teuton line of supplies has been taken and a retirement will be the only answer.

If the Teuton centre gives way and the town of Brzezany is occupied by the Russians, the entire line of the Zlota Lipa, of which the Russians already hold the lower section, will fail. A retirement will then have to be made as far as the Gnita Lipa, some distance to the west. Halicz will automatically be evacuated and the way to Lemberg opened from the south. That section of the Teuton line which is now almost parallel to the Dneister from in front of Halicz almost to the mouth of the Zlota Lipa will be seriously involved and will be fortunate to make good its retreat, as it is already half surrounded.

If the Halicz front fails this same section of the Teuton line is in even greater danger. Not only that, the entire Teuton army in Galicia will be turned, and a general retirement along the whole line will have to follow. Such a retirement under the terrific pressure which the Russians are exerting along almost the entire line, will be a matter of great difficulty and must result in considerable loss in men and material.

These are the things the Russians are fighting for. These are the results which must flow from a Russian success. The stakes are large, and the Russians are paying an enormous price for their opportunity to gamble for them. The battle is still being waged with unremitting vigor. It cannot continue much longer without one side or the other cracking. As yet there is no sign of any such thing.

ALLIED U-BOAT NOTE VIEWED AS A THREAT

warning that accompanied its pronouncement, and he has warned the Entente Allies, in the memorandum made public tonight, that this Government holds it to be the duty of belligerent powers to "distinguish between submarines of neutral and belligerent nationality, and that responsibility for any conflict that may arise between belligerent warships and neutral submarines on account of the neglect of a belligerent to so distinguish between these classes of submarines must rest entirely upon the negligent power."

In some quarters the "warning" conveyed in the Entente memorandum is characterized as amounting almost to a "threat" to fire upon neutral submarines. There is nothing to indicate that the American Government regarded it as more than an informal "warning," and not as a threat, but the gravity of the question was considered such as to impel this Government to give a counter-warning to the nations signatory to the memorandum that this Government would hold responsible any nation that should fire upon an American submarine through neglect to distinguish it from a German craft.

The memorandmu made public tonight bears date of Aug. 31, 1916. It is in reply to a memorandum dated Aug. 22, delivered by the British Embassy at Washington to Secretary Lansing on Aug. 23. The Governments of France, Russia, and Japan joined in the memorandum. Its text was withheld until last night, however, when it was made public in London, and cabled to New York in the textual form in which it was printed in THE NEW YORK TIMES this morning. The American reply was delivered to the British, French, Russian, and Japanese Embassies here simultaneously. Afterward copies of the memorandum were sent to the Italian and Portuguese Governments, these nations, as allies, having subscribed to the rule of action laid down in the memorandum of the Entente Allies.

Raised by Deutschland Incident.

In their memorandum the Entente Allies take the position that "belligerent submarines, regardless of their use," should not be permitted by neutrals to "avail themselves of neutral waters, roadsteads, and harbors." This rule of action, if adopted by the American Government, would bar the entry of commercial submarines like the Deutschland and of war submarines like the U-53. The memorandum was delivered after the Deutschland had been treated by this Government as a commercial vessel; in fact, almost simultaneously with the arrival of the Deutschland at Bremen. This Government's refusal to treat the Deutschland as a vessel that should have been interned was mainly responsible for the action of the Entente Powers in delivering this memorandum.

This Government refused to accept the proposed new rule of action offered by the Entente Allies; in fact, challenged their endeavor to set up and enforce such an innovation, and when the U-53 arrived at Newport, frankly declaring itself to be a war vessel, no attempt was made by this Government to interfere with it.

Germany to Pay for Sunken Ship.

LONDON, Wednesday, Oct. 11.—Germany has notified Norway that she regrets the torpedoing of the steamer Sjolyst, which was sunk on April 9 while in ballast, according to a Reuter dispatch from Christiania. Germany declares her readiness to pay full indemnity. This has resulted from the protest registered by the Norwegian Government.

FRENCH SMASH LINE SOUTH OF SOMME

CAPTURE 1,200 PRISONERS

British Also Improve Their Front South of the Ancre, Taking 268 Germans.

LONDON, Oct. 10.—After a bombardment lasting several days, and which became particularly intense during the night and early this morning, the French troops south of the Somme made an attack today on a front of about three miles extending from Berny-en-Santerre to Chaulnes. The attack was entirely successful, according to the French War Office report this evening The village of Bovent, (south of Deniécourt,) was captured, and in addition the northern and western outskirts of Ablaincourt and the greater part of Chaulnes Wood. The day's operations netted 1,200 prisoners.

This advance squeezes out a wide salient which projected into the French line north of Chaulnes. By the capture of the greater part of Chaulnes Wood the French also threaten seriously the German hold on the town itself, which is defended from the northwest by the wood.

The British continue to improve their positions south of the Ancre, and according to tonight's statement from General Haig they have captured 268 more prisoners.

The text of the French night report follows:

> North of the Somme there was greatly artillery activity on both sides. A surprise attack south of Sailly-Saillisel brought us fifty prisoners, two of them officers.
> South of the Somme we attacked on a front of five kilometers (3⅛ miles) between Berny-en-Santerre and Chaulnes. Our infantry vigorously carried the enemy position, which was its objective, and went beyond it an appreciable distance at certain points. The hamlet of Bovent, the northern and western outskirts of Ablaincourt and the greater part of Chaulnes Wood were captured.
> On the remainder of the front there is nothing to report.

The French afternoon communiqué follows:

> South of the Somme there was reciprocal artillery activity. Beginning in the night, the enemy delivered a curtain of fire on the Deniécourt sector and bombarded with tear-producing shells the outskirts of Lihons. There is nothing to report from the remainder of the front.
> Our aeroplanes have shown themselves particularly active in the region of Remiremont and on the Somme. They fought six aerial battles, bombarded St. Pierre Vaast Wood and carried out numerous reconnoissances.

The official communication from Gen. Haig's headquarters in France issued tonight reads:

> The work of improving our new positions south of the Ancre continued today without special incident. In addition to those reported, a further 268 German prisoners were brought in, including five officers.
> An enemy aeroplane was brought down north of Neuville-St. Vaast. Yesterday our own aircraft were again very active. One of our machines is missing.

The British afternoon statement says:

> At dawn this morning enemy infantry in the open in the neighborhood of Grandcourt were caught under our artillery fire.
> A successful raid was made by us last night southwest of Givenchy. The enemy's trenches were entered, although they were held with considerable strength. Two dugouts were bombed. Casualties were inflicted on the enemy.

Attacks Fruitless, Says Berlin.

BERLIN, Oct. 10.—All the attacks made by the Anglo-French forces on the River Ancre and Somme yesterday, says the official statement issued by the German Army Headquarters today, were fruitless. The announcement follows:

> Army group of Prince Rupprecht: Yesterday, especially in the hours of the evening and the night, the enemy again delivered strong attacks on the long battle front between the Ancre and the Somme. All his efforts were fruitless. Attempts of the French to advance east of Vermandovillers were frustrated.
> Army group of the German Crown Prince: On both sides of the Meuse (Verdun front) there were spirited encounters with artillery and minethrowers.

NEW ROCHELLE CARS, LONG IDLE, RUN AGAIN

Fifty Military Policemen, Aiding Regular Force, Keep the Strikers in Order.

TO INCREASE SERVICE TODAY

Mahon Urges New York Union Men to Keep Up Traction Fight and Promises Benefits.

While William D. Mahon, President of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes, was assuring members of that organization yesterday that they had only to hold fast to win their fight with the traction companies, the union lost further ground by the resumption of partial car service in New Rochelle. Only two cars were run in that city, but they continued in operation all day, despite the crowds of strikers who lined the sidewalks until dispersed by the police. Several "test" cars run on Monday encountered considerable opposition.

Yesterday's service was not particularly profitable for the traction company, as few persons cared to risk assault on the cars, but it was generally welcomed by a footsore public which, with the exception of two weeks, had been without trolley service since July 22, when the first strike went into effect. The cars ran under fifteen-minute headway, and were not molested, mainly because the entire police force had been detailed to strike duty. Fifty "military policemen," engaged from a Manhattan detective agency, also patrolled the streets. They wore khaki uniforms and puttees, and attracted much attention.

Additional cars will be run in New Rochelle today, and it is proposed to build up the service gradually.

In assuring the strikers yesterday that they would win if they remained faithful to their leaders, Mr. Mahon denied recent reports that he intended to advise carmen to return to their places. He admitted that he had made no progress in attempting to effect a settlement with the officials of the traction companies.

"My information shows," he said in a formal statement to the strikers, "that the ink had hardly dried upon the agreements of Aug. 6 and 7 before the companies set about systematically to overthrow the agreement and destroy the organization by compelling employes to make with them individual contracts, this action being an absolute violation—not only violation but repudiation—of the agreement they had made. Therefore, there was nothing left for you to do but submit and allow your organization to be destroyed, or strike again, and through your strike secure again these rights."

Mr. Mahon said he would return to Detroit, the national headquarters of the union, to make arrangements for the payment of strike benefits.

THE INSTRUMENT OF QUALITY
Sonora
CLEAR AS A BELL

What do you know about a phonograph?

1—Will it play all types of disc records without makeshift additions? Sonora will.
2—Is its motor efficent? Sonora's motor, made in Switzerland, runs, per winding, about twice as long as any other.
3—Does the sound box contain material that will deteriorate with age? Sonora's doesn't.
4—Does the sound amplifier form a clear unblurred tone? Sonora's does, due to its unique patented construction.
5—Is the tone control at the sound source—and does it reduce the volume of sound and not the quality? Sonora's is and does.
6—Is the envelope filing system such as to make the locating of records a matter of an instant? Sonora's is.
7—Has the machine an effective, reliable automatic stop? Sonora has.
8—Is the cabinet work beautiful, with graceful bulge curved lines? Answer "yes" for Sonora.
9—Is there a motor meter to tell how many more records the motor will play without rewinding? There is on Sonora.
10—What is the opinion of authorities regarding the instrument? At the Panama Pacific Exposition, Sonora won the highest score for tone quality.

Pearls as an Investment

The argument that Oriental Pearls are an investment is designed to condone the prohibitive cost of wearing them.

The point is, a Necklace of Pearls is a vestment rather than an investment—something to be worn and enjoyed, not put in a safe deposit box and worried over—an admirable adjunct to beauty, but a poor substitute for negotiable securities.

BULGARS IN FLIGHT AS BRITISH ADVANCE

SERBS CAPTURE 816 MEN

Italian Army from Avlona Resumes Advance in Albania Along Road to Monastir.

LONDON, Oct. 10.—Five more villages have been occupied by the British forces fighting their way forward in the Struma region of the Saloniki front and the Bulgarians there have retreated to the hills northwest of Seres. On the left of the line the Serbs continue their progress toward the Monastir plain, and in the fighting in the bend of the Cerna River have captured 816 prisoners. Meanwhile the Italian Army, based on Avlona, has again begun to push along the 140-mile road to Monastir, and have occupied Klisura, thirty-five miles from Avlona.

Following is the official report issued tonight by the French War Office:

On the Struma the enemy evacuated Chavdor-Mah, Ormanli, and Haznatar. In the centre there were patrol encounters and moderate artillery activity.

On the left wing our offensive continues successfully. There has been especially sharp fighting in the Cerna Bend between the Serbs and Bulgarians. In the course of these actions 816 prisoners, including 5 officers, have been taken.

Monastir and Prilep have been bombarded by our aeroplanes.

In Albania an Italian detachment yesterday occupied Klisura, southeast of Tepelini, on the Voyusa River. Sunday night an enemy aeroplane sailed over Avlona and dropped a bomb, which caused no damage.

The British report, issued earlier in the day, reads.

Struma Front.—Kalendra and Topalova are reported by a cavalry reconnaissance to have been evacuated by the enemy, who has fallen back to the hills northwest of the Seres. Kalendra and Homodos have been occupied.

Dorian Front.—Our patrols have been active and our artillery continues to bombard the enemy trenches.

German Army Headquarters made public the appended bulletin:

The enemy continued his attacks against the Bulgarian troops in the Cerna salient east of the Monastir-Florina Railway. Near Skochivir he achieved small results. Otherwise he was repulsed everywhere.

SOFIA, Oct. 9, (via London, Oct. 10.)—The following official announcement was made here today:

Macedonian Front: West of the Florina-Monastir railroad there was the usual reciprocal artillery fire. East of the railway the enemy continually bombarded our positions from Kenali to Skochivir. Under protection of this fire enemy battalions crossed the Cerna. We soon counterattacked, and the fighting continues. In the Moglena Valley there was activity on both sides with artillery and mines.

East and west of the Vardar and in the foothills of the Belaschitza Mountains there was listless artillery firing. We dispersed by our fire some enemy companies which were building breastworks near the villages of Sokolovo and Radile.

On the Struma front there were patrol engagements.

All was quiet on the Aegean coast.

General Retreat of Foe on Monastir Front Believed Imminent.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ATHENS, Oct. 9 (dispatch to the London Daily Chronicle.)—All day yesterday stern fighting continued all along the Allies' left, the Serbs being particularly heavily engaged, and every inch of ground being stubbornly disputed, but now it is obvious that the Serbians are superior to their enemies.

Monastir is not itself of great military importance; the taking of the town by itself would achieve little or nothing. What is important is the taking of positions to the west, across the River Cerna, which will not only bring about the fall of Monastir, but also force a big retreat of the enemy commanders, a retreat which will in all probability compel the abandonment of the famous Babuna defiles, thus freeing a large portion of Southern Serbia from the invader and placing the rest of the enemy line in considerable danger.

For the moment the main Serb effort is devoted to the capture of Chuka Height, the remaining eminence of great importance in the Kaimakcalan range. Good progress has been made toward achieving its capture. Already the Serbs have carried Skochivir, which is the half-way house toward the main point, so the next good news from the Serb front will be that they are in possession of this vital position.

It is the key to Monastir. Once the Serbians take it, the Bulgar positions at Kenali and in the Pelagonia Plain will be open to an enfilading fire from the Serbs's artillery. The abandonment of these positions will follow, and the advance on the front south of Monastir will be immediately facilitated.

Extremely important operations, too, are being carried out by the Serbs in the mountain region of Dobropolie. The capture of the chief Dobropolie summit already has been reported, and since then the Serbs have not ceased to advance, despite the desperate resistance of the Bulgars. The Dobropolie mass of mountains is linked up with Vetrinik Plateau, and a great deal depends on the possession of the latter eminence. It dominates the Vardar region on the west, and once upon it, the Serbs will have a way opened up for them towards Gradatz at the exit of the Babuna Pass. The advance in the Monastir and Brod regions, in the direction of Prilep, will therefore be very greatly facilitated.

Step by step the Serbs are fighting towards the north. The operations are going on methodically, and it must be said brilliantly. The pressure of the French and Russians on the left of the Serb line is increasing.

TO DISCUSS THE WAR IN REICHSTAG RECESS

Budget Committee Votes Itself Powers Which Have Been Hitherto Unexercised.

BERLIN, Oct. 10 (via London.)—The Budget Committee, after a long discussion today, rejected the motions of the National Liberals and Progressives for the appointment of a committee of the Reichstag with the right to sit during recesses, but adopted a Clerical substitute, giving the Budget Committee that right. This action results in no practical change, as the Budget Committee already possessed such powers; but a significant fact is that the Clerical motion includes the right of the committee to discuss the war.

The action of the National Liberals in the direction of making the foreign policies subject to the Reichstag is also significant, because heretofore this party has opposed changes in the direction of parliamentary government. The whole discussion is the outgrowth of the submarine and war aims controversy.

The Kölnische Zeitung now demands that the Imperial Chancellor openly inform the Reichstag of his position in these matters and permit their discussion in open session of the House.

GERMAN RULERS FOR PEACE.

Kaiser and King of Wuerttemberg Both Express Hopes.

LONDON, Oct. 10.—The hope of King William of Württemberg for "a speedy and honorable peace" is expressed in a telegram from the King to the German Chancellor, Dr. von Bethmann Hollweg, as quoted in a Reuter dispatch from Amsterdam.

The King's message, sent in response to the Chancellor's congratulations on the twenty-fifth anniversary of William's ascension to the throne, is quoted as follows:

"May God give a speedy and honorable peace which will guarantee us further progress. May He guide your Excellency, in whose wise leadership I firmly trust."

The following message of congratulation from Emperor William to the King is forwarded in an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Amsterdam:

"May your Majesty before long bring to your people the blessings of peace and may that peace repay all German Princes and subjects for the heavy sacrifices they have made for the Fatherland."

ITALIANS ADVANCE TOWARD ROVERETO

Storm Austrian Positions on the Slopes of Monte Pasubio—Repulse Attacks Elsewhere.

ROME, Oct. 10.—Heavy fighting continues in the Trentino, where the Italians are exerting heavy pressure on the Austrian lines, and are slowly pushing their way forward. The Italians, according to today's War Office report, stormed Austrian positions on the northern slopes of Monte Pasubio, (southeast of Rovereto,) capturing trenches in the sector of Cosmagnon and Sette Croci with about 175 prisoners.

In the Travignolo valley the Austrians were the attackers. Italian troops on the second peak of Col Bricon, (northeast of Trent,) drove off the Austrians, inflicting heavy losses. The Italians also repulsed an attack on the northern slopes of Monte Sief, further to the north.

The official report of the War Office follows:

On Monte Pasubio, after artillery preparation, our troops stormed and took enemy intrenchments in the sector of Cosmagnon and Sette Croci, and captured 176 men of the Kaiserpager, including six officers, and one machine gun.

In the Travignolo valley after a demonstration on the slopes of Cima Bocche the enemy attacked our positions on the second peak of Col Bricon in force. They were driven off with heavy losses and were pursued by the effective fire of our batteries. An attack against our advanced line on the northern slopes of Monte Sief was also decisively repulsed.

On the front in the Julian Alps the artillery activity on both sides has been increased. The enemy shelled Gorizia, causing damage to buildings and a few casualties among the inhabitants. In the course of small engagements on the Carso front forty-three prisoners were taken.

Last night hostile aeroplanes made another raid on the lower Isonzo, dropping a large number of bombs on villages in the Grado Lagoon and elsewhere. Three persons were killed and two others wounded, and some material damage was done.

One of our aeroplane squadrons dropped bombs on enemy positions on Col Santo, north of Monte Pasubio. Our aviators drove off numerous aerial attacks and returned safely.

RUMANIANS DRIVEN FROM TWO PASSES

Berlin Also Reports Capture of 1,175 Prisoners and 25 Guns in Kronstadt Battle.

LONDON, Oct. 10.—While Bucharest reports that only minor engagements have occurred on the Rumanian north and south fronts, Berlin announces that the Austro-German forces under General von Falkenhayn have captured the passes in the Hargitta and Carole Mountains and scored other successes elsewhere.

Following is the Rumanian War Office statement issued today:

On the northern and western front there have been minor engagements.

On the southern front there have been skirmishes and artillery bombardments along the Danube.

Says the German Army Headquarters report:

On the eastern front of the Transylvanian theatre progress was made everywhere. The exits from the Hargitta and and Carole Mountains into the upper and lower Alt Valley have been won. On both sides of Kronstadt our victorious troops are closely pressing the defeated Rumanians.

As a result of three days' battle at Kronstadt, 1,175 prisoners and twenty-five cannon, including thirteen heavy guns; numerous ammunition carts, and other war supplies have been brought in up to the present time. In addition we have captured two locomotives and more than 800 wagons, most of them loaded with provisions. According to the unanimous reports of our troops, the enemy suffered very heavy losses.

To the west of Vulcan Pass the frontier mountain of Negrului was captured.

A Story of Modern Mexico

Peace and Quiet

By EDWIN MILTON ROYLE

A STORY of youth and high spirits, showing the love of a girl and a man, both full of the joy of life. An adventurous young American (just out of Princeton and cut off by his father), believes that he wants peace and quiet, but he scarcely looks for it in the right place—modern Mexico. He gets mixed up with revolutionists, smugglers, filibusterers, and finally becomes an officer in the Mexican army. And, of course, the love affairs in this dashing tale of thrills and humor are not peaceful either.

WOMEN OF BERLIN CENSURED FOR GAYETY

From a Staff Correspondent.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Oct. 10.—A wholly unmerited attention has been paid not only by the Berlin press, but by that of all Germany, to the extraordinary charges of a mediocre literary woman against gay Berlin, published in Count von Reventlow's Deutsche Tageszeitung.

Marie Diers has actually seen elegantly dressed women laugh in the underground trains while the guns thundered their worst on the Somme. She was shocked at the crowded moving picture houses and theatres, and incensed at people visiting restaurants and cafés where they serve meals and drinks to Wagner or Strauss music while hospitals are filling up at the front and maimed invalids are about everywhere. She despises the members of her own sex who do not go about in mourning, but crowd department stores in eagerness to adorn themselves instead of staying at home knitting socks for the soldiers in the trenches. Summing up her impressions, Marie Diers concludes that Berliners live as though there were no war, and that Berlin ranks lowest in the cultural scale of the Empire.

Some time ago similar tirades on the vanity of Berlin women were resented by their own husbands serving in the trenches, who wrote to the newspapers that they did not wish their women folks to dress like scarecrows when they came home on leave. Marie Diers's lamentations are not only resented by the ordinary daily press throughout the country, but even by the trench newspapers on the various fronts. Today the Berlin Gemeindeblatt, the official municipal organ, even condescends to the mild censure of Marie Dier as an absurd slanderer.

HUGHES REPLIES TO DR. ELIOT

SAYS HE HURT BUSINESS

By Failing to Protect American Enterprise in Other Lands, Notably Mexico.

'ADVENTURERS' ABANDONED

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 10.—Following up his address of last night, in which he condemned the sinking of the Lusitania by a German submarine and the "ruthless" murder of American men, women, and children involved in that act, Charles E. Hughes tonight charged that President Wilson, by refusing to protect American lives, property, and commerce, according to the best traditions of the country, had seriously crippled American enterprise abroad and had deserted the business man who sought opportunities in foreign lands to "stew in his own juice." He characterized the plank in the Democratic platform of 1912, which promised protection to American citizens as "molasses to catch flies."

Speaks to 15,000 People.

The candidate had an enthusiastic audience of 15,000 people. He again pledged himself to protect the lives and property of American citizens throughout the world if elected President. The crowd arose and cheered the nominee repeatedly.

Mr. and Mrs. Hughes were joined by Miss Helen Hughes. When the three members of the family appeared together on the speaker's platform there was a demonstration lasting three minutes.

Republican leaders said it was one of the best Republican meetings ever held in the State. They feel there is a chance of capturing the electoral vote of Maryland.

Mr. Hughes was introduced by General James A. Gary, Postmaster General under President McKinley. The candidate repeated his pledge as to Mexico:

"There are certain principles that we can lay down to which we propose to adhere. They are important in Mexico; they are important in Latin America; they are important throughout the world. If intrusted with Executive responsibility, I propose to adhere to them. The first is that we will not meddle with things that do not concern us; the second is that we will not merely talk about rights of small States, but we will observe them; and the third is that it will be understood that at all events the lives and property of American citizens will be protected.

"The position which I take as to all matters affecting American rights," he went on, "is this: We want to serve the world. We want to serve humanity. I do not yield to any one in stating the lofty aspiration of our people. We want to live at peace in the world. We want all nations to be at peace, that the ideals of humanity may be realized. I want to see the organization of peace. I want to see adequate provision for the judicial determination of international controversies. I want to see proper provision made for councils or tribunals of conciliation. I want to see appropriate means to secure resort to these tribunals. I want to see conferences of the nations at frequent intervals, to the end that we may have what may be described as necessary legislative changes, in order that the conditions of things, as they are, if wrong, may not unnecessarily provoke strife because they are not properly remedied.

"I want to see this nation ready to perform its service by having its State Department, its diplomatic intercourse representing the nation through its very best talent, its highest gifts, its most thoroughly trained experts. I want to see the great people of America contribute their full power in that practicable way, to maintain the peace of the world; but we cannot serve humanity unless we maintain our self-respect and hold up the dignity of our nation."

Where Wilson Was Nominated.

Mr. Hughes spoke in the Fifth Regiment Armory, where President Wilson was nominated in 1912 and where the platform which he asserted showed a record of broken Democratic promises was ratified. It was in Baltimore also that the President recently delivered an address about the extension of American trade in foreign lands.

"Instead of aiding business enterprise, they have seriously crippled it here and abroad," Mr. Hughes asserted. He charged that the Underwood tariff had caused depression and unemployment, which would be found again at the close of the war. The promises of the Administration to aid American enterprise abroad, he said, were belied by its acts. Referring to the President's utterances he said:

"What avails such words when we do not protect American lives and American property abroad? The adequate protection of American citizens and their interests abroad, according to their rights under international law, is the cornerstone of a policy to promote American enterprise throughout the world. This protection has been deliberately and deplorably refused by this Administration."

He spoke of the proposed six-power loan to China and said that American bankers were informed that the Administration did not wish them to participate.

"Encouragement of the development of American interests abroad was dubbed dollar diplomacy," he said, "something shockingly reprehensible. In consequence I may say that, in respect to American interests abroad, we have had not only diplomacy without dollars but diplomacy without sense."

Replies to Dr. Eliot.

Continuing, Mr. Hughes replied to statements by Charles W. Eliot, President Emeritus of Harvard, made in a recent article. His speech in part follows:

"During the past three and one-half years one would suppose that any American who went to foreign lands to advance American industry and commerce was presumably a bad fellow who had lost his rights. Protect him? Why, didn't he go abroad to make money? Didn't he take his American enterprise beyond our borders? What a shameless proceeding! Let him stew in his own juice or let him come home. That is the sort of encouragement Americans have had.

"Then, again, who are these bad persons who outlaw themselves? If you have an American enterprise abroad, you have branch establishments, you have establishments of various sorts manned largely by American agents, American engineers, American merchants, American clerks. These are the rank and file of the men who are practically performing the American duty of 'serving the world.' And yet, when trouble arises we leave them to be destroyed.

"It is impossible to square the fine words now used with the action of the Administration. Its policy stands out clearly. One of its ablest supporters, one of the keenest minds of America—and I speak of him with the most profound respect—President Eliot, has examined the action of the Administration and has thus summarized the policy that it embodies: He pierces to the heart of the matter and he finds that the record of the Administration means this: 'No intervention by force of arms to protect on foreign soil American commercial and manufacturing adventurers who of their own free will have invested their money or risked their lives in foreign parts under alien jurisdiction.'

"Think of the import of that, you who represent the best genius of the world and are thinking of using it abroad. Think of that, you who it is suggested are to be asked to finance the chief undertakings of the world. Think of that, merchants, salesmen, tellers, clerks, and dealers, who in 'serving the world' take your place, remote from your friends and safeguards, in communities where revolutions are frequent and only respect for your flag and the power it symbolizes may stand between you and ruin, or even death.

"Again, President Eliot says: 'The Administration has gone far to establish non-intervention by force of arms for the protection of miners and commercial adventurers in foreign parts as the American policy.'

"If you want to have a concrete example of that policy, look at the record in Mexico.

"Finally, President Eliot says: 'America has now turned her back on the familiar policy of Rome and Great Britain of protecting or avenging their wandering citizens by force of arms, and has set up a quite different policy of her own.'

"Now note the characterization, 'wandering citizens,' 'American commercial and manufacturing adventurers,' 'miners and commercial adventurers in foreign parts.' On the one hand we have the beautiful phrase as to the 'best genius of the world,' on the other the stinging phrase which describes the advance guard of American enterprise in the language spoken by the Administration's record as interpreted by its best friends.

"Who are the 'commercial adventurers'? Who are the 'wandering citizens'? Are they a portion of those who represent American enterprise abroad? Have some been tried and outlawed without a hearing? Or does this pleasing description embrace all Americans who, representing the best genius of the world, are performing the American duty of service in foreign parts?

"What right had this Administration to change American policy as to the protection of American citizens? Was their platform 'molasses to catch flies,' otherwise known as American investors? Have they had any mandate from the American people or the slightest authority from the American people to withhold protection abroad? Have they used a delegated power, or have they abused their authority?

"Listen to the explicit words of the Democratic platform of 1912, upon which they asked the confidence of the electorate, as they now ask it, by their promises. The Democratic platform said: 'The constitutional rights of American citizens should protect them on our borders and go with them throughout the world, and every American citizens residing or having property in any foreign country is entitled to, and must be given, the full protection of the United States Government, both for himself and his property.'

"There is nothing here about 'commercial adventurers' and 'wandering citizens' and a 'different policy.' Nor is there a limit to the kind of protection thus explicitly promised. It is 'full protection' that American citizens were to have and have not had.

No Actual Force Necessary.

"I do not overlook Mr. Eliot's reference to 'force of arms.' We are desirous—no one more than I—of aiding and maintaining the peace of the world. I believe it to be a mistake to suppose that an adequate policy of protection to the known rights of American citizens is likely to necessitate the actual use of force. The sanction of force lies back of the laws and pursuits of peace. It is idle to expect that American enterprise will trust the assuarnce of a policy which invites the destruction of life and property by advance notice that no effective means will be taken to prevent it. Such a policy will paralyze American enterprise in the very places where it should be promoted.

"A self-respecting policy, worthy of the American name, maintaining American honor, assuring protection to the known rights of American citizens under international law, is absolutely necessary. That does not mean war. It means the security of a self-respecting peace. It means that regard will be paid to our just demands."

Tonight's address by Mr. Hughes was the second of the day. The first was delivered at Hagerstown, Md., before an audience in the grandstand at the Interstate Fair Grounds, and was devoted largely to a discussion of the tariff, the Adamson eight-hour law, and what the nominee termed the extravagance of the present Administration.

Mr. Hughes asserted that had there been written in the Democratic platform four years ago the kind of policy of non-protection of American lives and property which had been carried into effect "that party would not have had a ghost of a chance had there been six tickets in the field."

Speaking of the Adamson eight-hour law, he said:

"They told us four years ago in elegant phrase of the New Freedom, but in recent weeks, in yielding to the demand of force and demanding legislation without inquiry as to its justice, they have introduced us to the New Slavery."

Mr. Hughes left at 11:30 o'clock tonight for points in West Virginia.

Suit, $15.75
Cap, $1.79

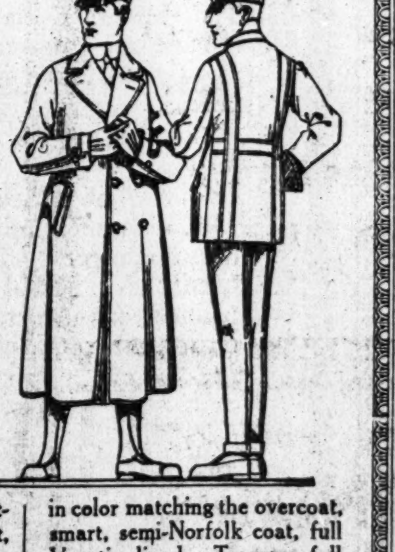
Complete



Instead of using whipcord for the overcoats of our standard winter outfits we have used a heavy frieze this year because of its superior wearing and warmth-giving qualities, two important features that will be appreciated by the man at the wheel.

The Overcoat is double-breasted and wool lined throughout, buttons to neck, and has convertible collar, wind cuffs and belted back.

The Suit is all wool whipcord, in color matching the overcoat, smart, semi-Norfolk coat, full Venetia lined. Trousers full length or knickerbockers.

The Cap is made of either frieze or whipcord.

ROOSEVELT BLAMES WILSON FOR RAIDS

Due to President's Ostrich Policy, War Stares at Us from U-Boats, He Says.

THE PHRASE OF A COWARD

"He Kept Us Out of War" So Described—Inexcusable to Tolerate Wilson's "Futility" Longer.

Taking the exploits of the German submersible, the U-53, off the shores of America as his text, Theodore Roosevelt in a statement made public last night launched another broadside against President Wilson.

The Colonel in this utterance traced to President Wilson's policy of inaction when Belgium was invaded by Germany, the long train of subsequent events growing out of the war which brought this country to the verge of a diplomatic break with Germany, as well as what Colonel Roosevelt in his statement terms England's invasion of American property rights on the high seas.

Colonel Roosevelt declares that the conduct of the war has led to a "complete breakdown of the code of international rights," and this he blames on "the Pontius Pilate-like construction which President Wilson has put on neutrality."

"President Wilson's ignoble shirking of responsibility has been misclothed in an utterly misleading phrase, the phrase of a coward, 'He kept us out of war,'" said the Colonel in his statement. "In actual reality, war has been creeping nearer and nearer until it stares at us from just beyond our three-mile limit, and we face it without policy, plan, purpose, or preparation.'

The Colonel said President Wilson betrayed his leadership of the neutrals, to which he laid claim in a recent note to Great Britain, when he permitted the sinking of two neutral vessels by the Teuton undersea visitor to pass without protest. He also raises the question whether Germany's guarantees to this country in the final note on the submarine question were lived up to when the commander of the German submersible put noncombatants from the torpedoed vessels in open rowboats on the October seas.

Here is the Colonel's statement in full:

"When, at the outbreak of the war, the German armies stood at the gates of Belgium, a question of momentous importance to this and coming generations was raised. It was a great question, that concerned all neutral nations, and America especially as the leading neutral power. It rested with us as a nation to decide whether or not we favored the abandonment of duty. President Wilson avoided taking any stand for the right. He stated that the war and its issues were no concern of ours. He was silent when Belgium suffered terrible wrong.

"The German statesmen who directed the armies toward Belgium, faced two alternatives: Either the rights of a neutral nation, like Belgium, had become a fact, supported by the opinion of the world, a fact which if violated would bring down upon the aggressor the protest and weight of neutral opinion, or else neutral rights were merely an empty fiction. In the latter case, if the Germans did not use Belgium as a territory through which to pass in order to attack France, they reasoned that their enemies would use Belgium without protest by other neutrals as a mobilization ground for an attack against them. If the United States failed to protest against this attack by Germany it was safe for these German chiefs to assume that there would be no protest by America against English or French misconduct.

"With an indifferent neutral world, the German chiefs decided that the advantage would lie with those who rushed through Belgium first. President Wilson's inaction, his failure to make any protest, proved that their estimation of the status of international law, the keeping of which depended mainly upon the vigor and initiative of America, was correct.

"President Wilson declared that the war and the issues of right and wrong involved in its conduct and methods were of no concern to America, the leading neutral. He thereby put America in the position of refusing to do her duty to others. He inspired contempt in others. This invited aggression by others. In the face of this aggression he speedily put America in a position of refusing to do her duty to her own citizens.

"Step by step international law has been broken down. By the attacks of German submarines upon merchantmen the lives of hundreds of Americans were sacrificed in a course which culminated in the sinking of the Lusitania. In a similar fashion, the commercial rights of property upon the sea were invaded by England, and the whole structure of international law for the protection of commerce and private property was broken down. The invasion of the rights of men and women to their lives was far more serious than the invasion of property rights, and it was this invasion that called for the first and strongest action on our part; but if we had taken such action it would have become our duty, a duty then easily performed, to instantly and fully protect our property rights.

"Many men question whether it will ever again be safe for nations to become interdependent by allowing themselves, so far as their necessaries are concerned, to depend upon foreign sources of supply. The theory of having each nation or group of nations build a Chinese wall around its borders is being seriously discussed because of the complete breakdown of the code of international rights. The responsibility for this breakdown rests primarily on the Pontius Pilate-like construction which President Wilson has put upon neutrality.

"Now the war has been carried to our very shores. There is no American who does not realize the awful tragedy of our indifference and inaction. Nine-tenths of wisdom is being wise in time. By taking the right step at the right time America's influence and leadership might have been made a stabilizing force. President Wilson's ignoble shirking of responsibility has been clothed in an utterly misleading phrase, the phrase of a coward, 'He kept us out of war.' In actual reality, war has been creeping nearer and nearer, until it stares at us from just beyond our three-mile limit, and we face it without policy, plan, purpose or preparation.

"No sane man can today be so blind as to believe President Wilson's original statement that the war was no concern of ours. Every thinking man must realize the utter futility of a statesmanship without plan or policy until such facts as these now stare it in the face.

"When America, as the leading neutral, refused to protest against the invasion of Belgium, the cornerstone of the structure of international law was removed. Neutral nations were left leaderless and helpless, and their rights open to attack from all belligerents. The futility of adroit shirking of our responsibility must be evident to all. Our shameful abandonment of the duty that we owed our own people in the case of the Lusitania was really a giant stride in the policy of impotent submission to the brute policy of the strong.

"In one of his notes to England President Wilson announced that America broadly assumed the unhesitating championship of neutral rights. England pays no more attention to this note than Germany did to the similar notes that she received, no more than Germany does now. Of the six ships on the way to and from American ports just sunk outside of our three-mile limit by German submarines, two were neutrals—one Norwegian and one Dutch. How has President Wilson's unhesitating championship of their rights shown itself? Moreover, putting their noncombatants in open rowboats on the October seas is in no way to guarantee their safety.

"But the chief point that this makes is that the war and the great military nations have come so close to us and that our country is no longer to be excused if it endures Mr. Wilson's futility or inaction. After three months of great effort we have concentrated on the Mexican border a force including practically all of the uniformed troops at our disposal, and they could not hold their own against an army which any one of the great military powers of Europe or Asia would put in New York within a fortnight or in San Francisco within a month. Our navy is our first need—and, by the way, all Americans should feel a thrill of pride in the way Admiral Gleaves has handled the destroyer squadron.

"But it is an unmanly folly to rely only on the navy. No American man is fit to be a citizen unless he is willing to fit himself to do efficient work for the country in time of war. We need universal military training of all our young men on the Swiss or Australian models. The time for the ostrich policy, the time for the head-in-a-hole policy, in America is past. America cannot afford to continue to play the part of the ostrich among nations; least of all, can she afford to be an elocutionary ostrich."

Riverdale Country School

This week Riverdale Country School opens its tenth year in its present location.

Situated as it is, well in the country, Riverdale is particularly healthful. Day pupils may travel to the School and back in the school autobus, which makes regular trips morning and evening. This keeps the boys away from danger of infection.

Thus the boy's health is safeguarded.

The Riverdale record at the June examinations of the College Entrance Board speaks for the efficiency of our scholastic work. Last June 87½% of all college examinations offered were passed; average marks of those who passed in the Recommended class, 91⅓%; average of those who passed in the Consented class, 81½%.

PLANS TO NATIONALIZE BRITISH WHEAT SUPPLY

British Government Begins by Making Large Purchases in Australia.

LONDON, Oct. 10.—The British Government has decided to appoint a Royal Commission, with Lord Crawford as Chairman, to take steps necessary to insure adequate and regular supplies of wheat and flour. Announcement to this effect was made in the House of Commons today by Walter Runciman, President of the Board of Trade. Mr. Runciman said it had become clear that the supplying of wheat for Great Britain could not be left to private enterprise.

In anticipation of this action the Government has made a large purchase of wheat in Australia. Steps have been taken to acquire the tonnage necessary for conveyance of the wheat to this country.

AUSTRIA USES PAPER IN PLACE OF COTTON

Rough Cloth Produced by New Process, Which It Is Hoped to Improve.

VIENNA, Oct. 7, (via London, Oct. 9.) (Delayed.)—Paper in the place of cotton has proved of extraordinary value in solving one of Austria-Hungary's greatest economic problems, according to Arthur Kuffler, President of the War Association of Cotton Spinners, which is the Government organization controlling cotton consumption. Herr Kuffler explained today to the correspondent of The Associated Press how Austria-Hungary has met the situation caused by the cutting off of American cotton through the British blockade.

He showed a vast assortment of fabrics made from paper, which he said was taking the place of cotton. The articles ranged from flour bags holding 200 pounds to twine. Other textiles were manufactured from a mixture of paper yarn as warp and cotton or wool as filling. They ranged from coarse white goods to fairly fine cloth. These paper fabrics, after being woven, are treated chemically to make them impervious to water and more durable and pliable. Herr Kuffler said that the industry was only starting, and that the products were constantly improving.

"There is no telling," he said, "what paper cloth may lead to yet."

Another substitute for cotton has been found in the common nettle. This weed has been converted into fabrics of a high quality, approaching the nature of linen.

FARMERS IN A TRUST, MILK DEALERS HOLD

Distributers Will Tell Court the Dairymen's League Is a Corporation for Profit.

BRILL SEES END OF FIGHT

President of Producers' Organization Submits Proposal to the Big Companies.

No further progress was made yesterday toward final settlement of the milk war, the three big milk distributing companies continuing to hold out against the Dairymen's League. Through the small dealers who have surrendered to the league, and through the emergency milk supplies procured by the big companies, however, the city received a larger percentage of its milk yesterday than at any time since the fight began. The Board of Health records showed that about 60 per cent. of the normal supply came in.

President Jacob S. Brill of the Dairymen's League expressed his belief that the milk controversy in New York City would soon be over. With the hope of promoting this agreement he submitted late last night to the large dealers a plan for getting together. When their replies are received today he will ask for immediate consideration by the league's Executive Committee. He said he had reason to believe that the proposition would be favorably received by both sides.

Two inquiries set for yesterday were postponed until today. One was the hearing of Attorney General Woodbury, before Special Referee Dykman, which will take place this morning in the rooms of the Merchants' Association in the Woolworth Building.

The second hearing today is to be held before Supreme Court Justice Goff. In it State Commissioner of Foods and Markets John J. Dillon is required to show cause why the Dairymen's League should not be restrained from interfering with the business of the Sheffield Farms-Slawson-Decker Company. George W. Alger, counsel for the company, said yesterday:

"I have advised our company that the league's organization is illegal, that the combination it proposes to make is expressly forbidden by the Donnelly act, and that any company entering into a contract with it would be itself subject to a fine of $20,000 as well as indictment of its officers subject to criminal imprisonment for a year and a fine of $5,000 each.

"The public does not realize the seriousness of the legal aspect of this whole matter. The Dairymen's League is not a co-operative association, but an ordinary business corporation, organized under the laws of New Jersey, with a capital stock of $100,000, divided into shares. It has never obtained a certificate authorizing it to do business in New York. It proposes to get contracts from all the milk producers, getting from them what is, in substance, a power of attorney, to fix the price for milk to the consumer and the dealer, with a commission to the Dairymen's League on all the milk which it handles as agent, which commission has been estimated as about $500 a day if their plan succeeds. Dillon has injected himself into the matter as exclusive agent for the producers."

In his capacity of a State official Mr. Dillon would be represented by a lawyer from the State Attorney General's office in any legal proceeding in which he was named.

Commissioner Dillon himself is said by some of the interested persons to be the stumbling block which is keeping the big companies from dealing with the league. One high official of a large distributing company yesterday said he thought his company could quickly arrive at satisfactory terms with the farmers belonging to the league if Dillon could be eliminated. His company was willing to pay the price the farmers said they needed to insure them a fair profit.

Borden's yesterday received about 50 per cent. of their normal supply. The Sheffield and Mutual-McDermott Companies said they received about 70 per cent. each. The small distributers who had signed league contracts received their full supply, according to Commissioner Dillon. He said that all differences that had existed among league members had been straightened out, temporarily at least, and that all of the farmers were united in their fight.

Jersey City and Hoboken plan to discontinue their emergency municipal milk stations today, as a result of the increased supply that has reached the two towns since the milk situation was relieved by the surrender of the small distributers. These two Jersey towns have been distributing milk from their police stations.

Machanska has the contract for repaving Twenty-second Street and aroused the strikers by ordering his men to remove paving stones the strikers had put on the car tracks.

Even Boys Carry Pistols.

The police had hoped to forestall serious violence by a raid on Mydosh's Hall, Twenty-first Street and Avenue F, early in the morning. They seized thirty-five rifles and fifty swords, the property of a military organization, but the strikers seemed to have plenty of other weapons. Even children paraded the streets with revolvers, a boy of 6 being observed carrying a brand-new weapon so large that he needed both hands to hold it.

Although the Standard Oil Company announced that few more than 1,500 of their 5,600 men were on strike, more than 6,000 men were kept from work yesterday. Supt. George B. Hennessey closed the Standard Oil plant in the morning, announcing that oil steamers would be diverted to Philadelphia until the trouble was over, and that his company would make no attempt to use strikebreakers. There are 4,600 men regularly employed in this plant, with 1,000 more in the Bergen Point Chemical Company, which is affiliated with it, and which also closed. The Tidewater Company shut down its barrel works because they were beyond police protection, leaving 200 men without work, and the Vacuum Oil Company closed also, making 600 men idle.

Yesterday the hundreds of men in the nickel and chemical companies were allowed to work, the strike guards inspecting their union cards at the dead line and notifying other guards to let them through by rapping loudly on an iron trolley pole with a club. These men will be stopped today, however.

Last night Constable Hook was quiet and peaceful, but it was only because the strikers were left unmolested. Bayonne dreaded what the morning would bring when some of the plants renewed their efforts to continue operations.

GREEK CABINET FORMED.

Minister of Marine Only Member of Former Ministry Retained.

LONDON, Oct. 10.—Telegraphing from Athens yesterday, Reuter's correspondent said Professor Lambros had succeeded in forming a Cabinet, which will be sworn in today. It is composed as follows:

Minister of War—GENERAL DRACOS.

Minister of Finance—SOCRATES TSANITOFLEAS.

Minister of Justice—CONSTANTINE ANDONOPULOS.

Minister of Interior—ALEXANDER TSELOS.

Minister of National Economy—Probably M. OECONOMIDES.

The correspondent describes this as politically the most colorless Cabinet Greece has ever known.

FOR YOUNG MEN and Men Who Stay Young

We realize the particular need of clothes modeled to express the character and to fit the forms of young men. In SOCIETY BRAND CLOTHES this need has been fulfilled. So cleverly are they designed that the element of youth is always present whether cut for longs, shorts, young stouts or other irregular sizes.

They cost no more than clothes that lack their distinctive features. They have at last supplanted the finer tailor-made clothes. Ready-to-wear, $20 to $50.

If you seek that extra quality of fabric, ask for "Double Service" Clothes, sold at $30 and up.

LAZARO

"The Greatest Tenor since Rubini—a Greater than Gayarre!"

THE voice that swept whole countries into adoration. And you can hear it on Columbia Records before the great tenor makes his first appearance on the opera stage in this country.

In Lazaro, the world is listening to a voice that will be recalled in future generations as the great world tenor. Not only is there no voice of greater power, but there is no tenor with such range or control.

12-inch—$3.00 each

48747 L'AFRICANA—O PARADISO! (Oh Paradise on Earth).
48783—I PURITANI—A TE O CARA. (Often, Dearest).

Imagine a tenor voice that shades down to a whisper, to an exquisite, scarce-breathed shadow of sound—then is carried higher and yet higher; swelling, sustained, a mighty organ-note—until the very air seems ringing with its power.

Your dealer has Lazaro's records now. Ask him to play them—and hear a tenor who has no equal in the world.

BROOKLYN AT HOME CONQUERS RED SOX

day. Therefore the sight of Hooper, potent enemy of Brooklyn fans though he is, striding to the plate with brandished weapon brought a round of applause.

Coombs gave the Boston right fielder two wide ones, and then sent a pair of straight ones over the pan without getting more than a quiver of the muscles from Hooper. The next looked good to him and he fouled it to the right field boxes. Then by the certain method of sending a fly toward Zach Wheat he insured himself a period of complete repose.

Janvrin's sharp grounder encountered Mowrey's gloved left, and was converted into an out at first. Shorten, who was in Boston's lineup in place of Walker at centre field, took two balls and two strikes, and then singled to right centre. Hoblitzel picked out one about shoulder high, and drilled it past Daubert and Cutshaw. Stengel was on the grass-ripping sphere like a flash, however. He clutched it, straightened up, and saw that Shorten had turned second and was on his way to third. There was a whizz and a thud. The whizz was Stengel's lightning throw and the thud was the impact of the ball with Mowrey's outstretched hands at third. Shorten was out by fifteen feet.

Robins Start With Rush.

Brooklyn promised much, but achieved little in its portion of the first inning. There were two strikes on Myers when Mays, taking a sudden dislike to the shape of Myers's kneecap, strove to transform it by means of an inshoot. Myers, although not by any means constructed of solid ivory in the upper stories, must have some such material in his robust limbs, for he cantered to first gleefully as soon as somebody told him he had been hit. Daubert beat out a bunt, slowly handled by Mays, and converted thereby into a hit. Stengel sacrificed the two runners each a base farther on their journey.

Mays, in this time of trouble, took the advice of able and influential counselors, consisting of every Boston player near enough to be heard, and paid Wheat the compliment of four successive wide ones, so far away, indeed, that Zach would have been obliged to take a taxi to get at them. Standing room was now at a premium on all the bases, and only one man out.

Cutshaw drove a grounder toward first, which Hoblitzel ran to meet, and caught Myers at the plate. The count on Mowrey stood three and two, when Mays sent in a fast one, which broke over the heart of the plate. With the throw all three runners naturally dashed forward, as two were out. Mowrey didn't do any dashing himself. He stood there, for some mysterious reason, which earthly minds are unable to fathom, and heard the mellifluous voice of Hank O'Day announce: "Three strikes—yer out!"

It was one-two-three for both teams in the second session. Lewis, Gardner and Scott filed out, a lusty drive from the bat of the crack shortstop being captured in deep left by Wheat on the run. Olson fell a victim to Scott's quick and accurate handling of his grounder. Three pitched balls put Miller hors de combat on strikes, and Scott repeated his depredations in the case of Coombs. Hooper singled in the first half of the third, but Miller, who has been a deadly opponent of thefts in this series, caught the Red Sox fielder trying to purloin second.

Robins Assume a Lead.

The Superbas took substantial advantage of their opportunities in their half of the same period, and emerged therefrom with a lead which they never relinquished. Hy Myers was first up and he slashed a sharp grounder to Scott. The shortstop mishandled it, but recovered in time to get Myers at first. Daubert, much encouraged by his single of the first inning, smashed a ringing blow to right, which proved good for only one base. Stengel took a strike and a ball and then drove a single to left. Daubert was held on second. Wheat filed straight into the hands of Lewis, and two were gone. Cutshaw, remiss recently in a fielding way, made amends for all such shortcomings with a clean single just inside the right field line. Daubert scored on the blow and Stengel perched on third. Cutshaw got down to second as Hooper threw unavailingly to the plate to catch Daubert. Mike Mowrey, entering into the spirit of the occasion, whacked a whizzer toward left. It got past Gardner, but the irrepressible Scott rushed on the whirling sphere with malevolent intent. He made a marvelous stop and shot the ball to Hoblitzel for the out.

Superbas, 1; Red Sox, 0, seems a very neat score, and most of the onlookers would have been content to let it go at that. Not so with the parties of the first part, however. They desired more, much more, from destiny. Three of the delegation from the shore of Massachusetts Bay faced Coombs in the fourth inning. Janvrin and Hoblitzel filed out. Shorten singled to left, but paid the cost of his temerity in trying to steal under the watchful eye of Miller.

Dodgers Insist on More.

Now a reasonable man would think 1 to 0 at least satisfactory. The Dodgers, however, were out to make all the hay possible. They made two loads of it in the fifth. The Red Sox went out in sedate procession and then the fireworks display was continued. Stengel's high foul was caught by Gardner with his knees pressed against a box opposite third base. Four of Mays's five offerings to Wheat went astray and the left fielder walked. Cutshaw was the second out, on a little grasser to Mays. The latter, now a bit up in the air, passed Mowrey. The first ball that sailed up to Olson struck him as satisfactory for his purposes, and he drove it to the field stands beyond Shorten's garden. Wheat and Mowrey were at home brushing their hair by the time it was fielded back to the diamond, and Olson was on third. He perished there as Miller's bounder was fielded to first by Scott.

This is, in a general way, the complete chronicle of the doings of the Dodgers for the afternoon. Up to the present the Red Sox have served only as a dun background to make more effulgent the glory of their rivals. Their day is coming, though. In fact, here it is now.

In the sixth inning Olson got Thomas's bounder and threw the Boston catcher out at first. Henriksen, batting for Carl Mays, whose career was over for the day, was the beneficiary of a base on balls. Hooper tarried not in meditation, but lashed the second ball handed him to right centre for three bases. Henriksen jubilantly completed his journey on the hit. Janvrin filed to Cutshaw. Shorten, noticing the anxious Hooper straining at the leash on third, brought him home with a single to centre. Hoblitzel hit to Coombs and retired at first.

The lead of Brooklyn's athletes having thus rudely been reduced to two runs, Daubert strove to regain at least one by a tremendous drive to deep left field. He would have made the circuit on it except that Umpire O'Day decided that he had not touched the home plate on his inward slide. The decision met with scant favor in the stands, but was doubtless correct.

In the seventh, after Lewis had grounded out to Daubert, Gardner smashed one of the shoots of Coombs over the right-field fence. The anxiety of the crowd at this point was shared by Robinson, who extracted Coombs and inserted Pfeffer, with the gratifying result noted above. Scoring by both teams was over for the day, and the score remained at 4 to 3.

BROOKLYN ENJOYS ITS VICTORY

First Series Experience, However, Has Inconveniences for Fans.

Brooklyn's experience with its first world's series games yesterday was satisfactory, so far as the final outcome of the game went. It began under rather depressing conditions, for the results of those two games up at Boston were almost as chilling to the fans as were the breezes which passed over Ebbets Field and which had a tingle in them as if they had passed by a few ice vaults in the outlying districts on their way. Overcoats, sweaters, and furs were quite de rigueur, as they say on the Heights, and arctic galoshes and ear tabs would have been in evidence had visitors to the ball field been as able to get at them as they were at the frankfurters and sandwiches, well slathered with the hottest of mustard, which warmed up the inner man, temporarily at all events.

For the benefit of the fans of the bleacher variety there had been constructed in the rear of the centre field a pen which would accommodate two or three thousand of them at $1 per fan. The tariff for their old rooting space back of left field had been doubled, and they had to forego the pleasures of their old stamping ground for the new barracks. These shut off the view of a great part of the score and announcement board from the patrons of the stands, and so kept the crowd guessing as to just what was going on when the pitchers and other players were shifted during the exigencies of the game—exigencies in this instance meaning casualties to pitchers who had been knocked out of the box and gave way to emergency batsmen.

A substitute board was lacking, and those who had paid their $3 or $5 for a seat in the chilling wind and who, with no familiarity with the countenances of the players to cheer and enlighten them, kept themselves warm for a few minutes by shouting frantically at one another in efforts to decide which one of the many guesses as to identity was the correct one. The announcers who shouted the changes at the crowd through megaphones were about as intelligible as those in railroad stations.

Many Vacant Seats.

Brooklyn took rather kindly to its first experience in the world's series business, even though it did not pack the inclosure at the Flatbush grounds. There were stretches of unoccupied boxes at either end of them and vast stretches of them in the upper tier. The bleacherites had stood the gaff patriotically, but the fan with more money refused to rush in thousands for the seats which belated announcements Tuesday evening said were to be had at the ticket office with the opening of the gates yesterday. Meantime the usual stories of vast premiums paid for seats were put in circulation by the ticket speculators and their friends. Yet it was wonderful how easy it was to procure from the thrifty ticket venders choice seats in the upper tier which ordinarily would have sold for $3 at $2 each and after the game had advanced a couple of innings at $1. The speculators had been stung and stung badly, for a lot of them had tickets which they were quite ready to dispose of as old paper after the game. The seats were rather slow in filling up in the lower tier until after a couple of innings had been played, and very many of the upper tier seats were vacant all through the game.

That very picturesque bunch of Bostonians who call themselves the Royal Rooters, and who are sane and conservative business men until a world's series begins, seemed to be particular sufferers in the matter of the distribution of tickets. They came down from Boston several hundred strong with a red-coated and lusty-lunged band, decorated themselves with badges and sashes and big medals with Carrigan's picture on them, burdened themselves with bannerettes bearing in huge letters either the legend "Royal Rooters" or "Red Sox," and then paraded about the streets of New York and over the greensward of the ball field like an army possessed on a holiday.

They wanted a good spot at the ball field in which to exploit themselves and their loyalty to the Red Sox. They were ready to pay for it. Instead of getting it they got a section of seats down in the extreme upper corner of the stand nearest the left field, where they were practically unseen and were practically unheard. But their band would not be silenced, and over the grouchy bodies and heads of the Royal Rooters it sent out the strains of the war song, "Tessie." Brooklyn had to see the Rooters and listen to their song, for they are both insistent and strenuous. But they were very bitter because they had been poked away into the most undesirable corner of the stand.

Royal Rooters Loyal.

But they were loyal, were those Royal Rooters, and even when the score was against their boys from Boston they had offered to bet at odds of 4 to 5 and then at even money that the Red Sox would win. When the score was 4 to 2 against the Sox at the end of the sixth inning, and things did look shaky for Brooklyn from their viewpoint, these Royal Rooters yelled frantically that they would bet as high as 6 to 5 on the Red Sox. Brooklynites did not accept the chance in very large numbers. It was not a betting crowd that was over in their vicinity.

But there was a party of New Yorkers who went over to Ebbets Field yesterday filled with confidence in the Red Sox who found things different. It knew where to find Brooklyn men who had money and a disposition to bet it. All last evening the Brooklyn men were there trying to get better than the even money offered that the Brooklyns would win today's game. At the same time the odds were 11 to 5 against Brooklyn to win the series. Brooklyn men as a rule were holding out for 3 to 1, and failed to get it.

Brooklyn fandom's enthusiasm reached that point which makes it a blood relation to wildness at that point in the third inning when a hit by Cutshaw brought Daubert across the plate with the first run. Tin horns, cowbells, police whistles, and other inventions for making noises combined in an ear-racking cataclysm of sounds which so filled the atmosphere for miles around with wave sounds as to put wireless telegraphy in Brooklyn out of business. It must have easily carried the news of a run scored by Brooklyn to the farmers of New Utrecht, Flatlands, and Gravesend, and eke to the few persons on duty in Borough Hall. It was the first run in a world's series that most of the fans had ever seen scored, and they were glad to let the whole world know that they fully approved of that sort of thing and were ready for more.

Fans Go Wild in Fourth.

When Olsen brought home another run in the fourth, and then supplemented it by sending Wheat and Mowrey home in the next inning with a whacking three-baser, fandom cut loose with renewed vigor, and made previous efforts appear like child-like serenity. The fans danced up and down, shouted until there was not another bit of noise left in their vocal organs, and all rings previously registered by the well-known welkin were as dead silences in comparison. It was as if all Brooklyn had joined in a paean of joy over the discovery of a new and imperishable source of happiness. It was the ultimate limit of ecstasy.

When the ninth inning had ended the fans poured into the field, surged over to the dugout where the Brooklyn players were assembled, indulged in silent idolatry of Robinson's bunch of players for a couple of minutes, and then wore themselves to a frazzle in a frenzied parade and snake dance, led by the Brooklyn band and two young enthusiasts bearing aloft the great green banner with its baseball emblazonment which is the gonfalon of the Brooklyn club and Charles H. Ebbets. Worn-out with their ebullitions, a thoroughly tired and incomparably happy bunch of a couple of thousand of fifty-ninth degree fans finally tore themselves from the field of victory and went to their homes to dream of the victory that is, the one that may be today with Marquard pitching, and of the world's series pennant they believe may yet float from the staff of the Ebbets Field grounds.

SCOREBOARD DRAWS FANS.

Miniature Diamond on Times Building Popular Despite Cold Weather.

Yesterday's sudden change in the weather did not affect materially the daily gathering in front of the miniature diamond on the northern end of the Times building, although Winter overcoats were in predominance. If anything, there seemed to be a larger crowd. Broadway north to Forty-fourth Street, on each side, was packed thickly and the dense throng overflowed for a considerable distance into the east and west sides of Forty-third Street. Policemen, mounted and afoot, were not generally inclined toward strict enforcement of any disciplinarian methods, and several spaces, which for the first two games had been forbidden territory, were occupied yesterday without interference.

The victory of the Robins, their first of the series, coming as it did on their own battle-ground, could not possibly have been received with more appreciation by the spectators at Ebbets Field than by the scoreboard fans. There was a noticeable confidence in the ability of the Brooklyn team to turn the tables on their rivals. When it was bulletined, as the innings wore on, that the Dodgers were accumulating runs with consistency, the enthusiasm of the crowd knew no bounds. Many seemed to have misgivings when Boston's three runs were recorded, but with the final out in the ninth inning the crowd dispersed with an "I told you so" expression dominant.

An innovation in yesterday's manipulation of the scoreboard met with the immediate approval of the spectators. The operators posted a continuous record of runs, hits and errors, and when pitching substitutions were made the names of the retiring twirlers were removed and in their places the names of the succeeding pitchers were posted. In the first two games announcements were made of the changes in the line-ups, but only those in the immediate vicinity of the board heard the announcer.

Asks for Relief After Gardner Knocks Ball Out of Park for Homer—Pfeffer Finishes Strong.

First Inning.

BOSTON.—There did not seem to be much force, or much break, to Colby Jack Coombs's offering when he started his play for Harry Hooper, the first man to oppose Brooklyn on the Robins' home territory, but he knew his men and kept cutting the corners until two strikes had been called by Umpire O'Day. With this margin Coombs could afford to take chances, and he put the next two wide of the plate, but Hooper declined to fall for the bait. The next one Coombs sent up to the plate looked like a balloon, and Hooper met it solidly, driving it over the right field wall, but just a foot or less outside the foul flag. On the next ball Hooper hit to the other side of the field, and his scraper was speared by Wheat. Janvrin took one ball and then rapped smartly to Mowrey, who made a fine pick up and had plenty of time to toss out the fast-moving young Sox infielder. Shorten, a rangy, hard-hitting outfielder, who bats right handed; was substituted by Manager Carrigan for Tilly Walker, who likes to hit portsiders. The wisdom of Bill's judgment was manifest when, with two and two called on him, Shorten laced a clean single to centre. Coombs put the first one wide to Hoblitzel, but the next one was right over, and Hobby belted it for a single to right, but when Shorten tried to make third he was thrown out by Stengel on a hard peg to Mowrey, which never touched the ground.

BROOKLYN—Carl Mays, who delivers the ball in subway fashion much on the style of little Jack Warhop, the Yankees' old underhand flinger, had plenty of speed as he put two strikes over on Hy Myers, who led off for the Robins. But like all good underhand pitchers Mays did not have much sense of direction and with his fourth heave he belted Myers on the shin, giving the Brooklyn outfielder a base. Then along came Jake Daubert with the first hit he has made in the series, a meek tap which was originally intended for a sacrifice but which the fast Captain Jake turned into a hit through slow fielding by Mays. Both Myers and Daubert moved up a peg when Stengel put down a sacrifice bunt along the third base line, which Mays had to relay quickly to Hobby for the out. Mays thought that good judgment was the better part of valor when he faced Zach Wheat. Probably under instructions from Carrigan he purposely walked the slugging Brooklynite. One reason why Brooklyn did not win on either Saturday or Monday cropped up at this stage when Cutshaw, with a chance to score a run with a sacrifice fly or two runs with a good single, hit the first pitched ball to Hobby, whose fast return to Catcher Thomas headed off Myers by several feet. Then Mike Mowrey put himself in the unenviable class with ball players who are eligible to hobnob with the mighty Casey in the Kingdom Come of Diamond performers by standing up at the plate while Mays deliberately shot over three strikes after he had sandwiched in three balls. Mowrey—with Daubert, Wheat, and Cutshaw just straining their every nerve for a chance to start for the plate—never moved his bat from his shoulder as Mays curved over the third strike.

Second Inning.

BOSTON.—Coombs continued to work smoothly with Lewis and, first putting over a ball, then a strike, forced him to hit to short centre, where Myers was waiting for the floater. Gardner took one ball before he raised a high fly to Cutshaw, who crossed back of Olson to obtain the put out. Scott waited for only one shot at the ball, and he sent it reeling far into left field, where Wheat, after a long chase, pulled it down just in front of the temporary bleachers.

BROOKLYN.—May's round-house curves looked inviting to Olson as the first one came up and he slammed it hard down to short. But the ever-ready Scott was waiting for the ball and shot it to Hobby with not a minute to spare to dispose of the Brooklyn Swede. Miller looked over three and, finding only one he liked, which he fouled, he was dismissed on three strikes. Coombs took a good swing at the first ball, but missed, then let the next go by, and he went out on a grasser via Scott and Hobby, a natty play.

Third Inning.

BOSTON.—Thomas went "fifty-fifty" on balls and strikes at two apiece before he popped a high flyer to the infield, which Cutshaw looked after. Mays imitated Thomas in waiting for two and two, then looked over the next one and passed up what Hank O'Day said was a good strike. With one ball chalked up for him, Hooper almost knocked Coombs down with a liner, but Jack ducked the hit in time to let it go spinning into centre for a single. After one ball had been called on Janvrin, Hooper attempted to steal second, but he fell victim to a perfect throw by Miller to Cutshaw. The play was decidedly close.

BROOKLYN—One strike was called on Myers before he hit sharply to short, and, although Scott fumbled momentarily, his rapid throw to Hoblitzel put Myers out. Daubert just missed being put out on a foul to left field which Duffy Lewis got his hands on after a long run and then dropped. After fouling three more, Jake made his first clean hit of the series, a line single to right. Stengel slashed another hit past Gardner, sending Daubert to second. Wheat could do nothing for the pair, lining straight at Lewis in left. Cutshaw, up again in the pinch, had the confidence of every Brooklyn rooter reposed in him, because they know his ability in tight places. The confidence was not wasted, for George came through with a blow just inside the right field foul line, which scored Daubert. Hooper made a poor attempt to catch Daubert at the plate, and Stengel went to third and Cutshaw to second on the throw-in. Only another smart play by Scott on Mowrey's speedy grounder saved Boston in this crisis. Gardner made an ineffective attempt to spear Mowrey's smash, missing by inches, but Scott was right on the job backing him up. Scooping the ball with his bare hand, Scott shot it to Hoblitzel just an instant before Mowery's spikes cut into the bag.

Fourth Inning.

BOSTON—Using his head, more than his arm, Coombs floated a lazy outcurve which Janvrin just touched for a foul, after which he filed out to Stengel. Shorten, a dangerous hitter at any time, again solved Coombs's delivery after two strikes and a ball was the count, and rammed it over Mowrey's head for his second successive single. The hit and run failed when Hobby missed the first ball, and Shorten was picked off going into second on Miller's heave to Olson. Hoblitzel concluded the chapter by flying out to Myers, who had only to step a few inches to make the catch.

BROOKLYN—Olson waited only for the first ball to start trouble for the Sox, putting down a swerving bunt toward third which gave him a base and then an extra bag when Gardner, making the first serious slipup in the Boston infield, threw wild past Hoblitzel. Miller's sacrifice, Mays to Janvrin, could not have been improved upon, sending Olson to third, whence he scored with the Robins' second counter when Coombs answered the pleadings of the mob by shooting a single to right. Coombs picked off Mays's first offering. Myers sent Kennebunk John to second with a neat sacrifice which Mays relayed to Hoblitzel, but there he expired, for Daubert, with two balls and a foul the count, hit to Scott and of course was out at first. Little Scott has proved one of the greatest shortstops who ever dug a spike into a diamond during a world's series contest.

Fifth Inning.

BOSTON—Coombs's speed was getting fainter, it seemed, as he curved over a strike on Duffy Lewis, but he was still clever enough to put the ball where it would be hardest for the Boston batter to hit. Lewis fouled off another, and then watched two balls buzz by before he stung Wheat's hand with a terrific smack to left. Coombs had to pitch three balls and two strikes to Gardner before he lofted to Mowrey. Scott, after missing the first one with a wicked swing, tapped a gentle bounder in front of the plate which Coombs picked up and tossed to Daubert for the out.

BROOKLYN—Stengel had Mays guessing for a time, and after fouling off three good ones drew three balls, but then gave Gardner an opportunity to make a sensational catch of his foul pop, for which the Boston third baseman had to reach over the temporary boxes. He took the ball almost off the head of a rotund gentleman who did not have time to get out of the way. Wheat swung between a strike-out and a base on balls, but with the count two and three one of Mays's underhand slants collided with the plate and Zach walked. Cutshaw missed the first one, and then after two balls the hit-and-run was called for, but Cutshaw's best contribution to the play was a splash to the pitchers' box, which Mays sent to Hobby before Cutshaw's arrival. Wheat reached second safely on the out. When the score board registered two balls and one strike on Mowrey, Bill Carrigan made a loud howl to Umpire O'Day after the veteran arbiter called a third ball when it appeared that Mowrey had swung at the toss. O'Day ruled, however, that Mowrey drew back before completing a swing, and the verdict gave Brooklyn a break in the luck, for on the next pitched ball Mike walked. He and Wheat scored when Olson singled out Mays's first offering to crash into the temporary bleachers in left centre for three bases. It was a mighty smack and would have been a home run had the field been devoid of the bleacher obstruction. Miller hit at the first one, but Scott was the barrier which prevented his grass-clipping grounder from becoming a hit. Scott made a grand stop and a still better throw in disposing of Miller, leaving Olson scoreless.

Sixth Inning.

BOSTON.—Thomas did not linger around long, for after one strike had been called he hit to Olson and went out to Daubert. Wise Bill here decreed that Mays had done all he could to let Brooklyn win, although working to check them, and sent in Henriksen, a sturdy pinch-hitter with a reputation for swinging at and meeting subway shoots. Maybe it was because he could not locate the plate, or perhaps it was because of the respect he bore for Henriksen's reputation, but Coombs could not find the pan and passed him with four straight balls. Just how costly was this move soon became apparent. Hooper, after missing the first strike, caught the next ball directly in the middle of his bat, and it never brought up until it hit the exit sign in right centre, scoring Henriksen and giving Hooper three bases, in spite of the earnest efforts of Myers and Stengel to hold it to a double. Coombs summoned enough skill to cause Janvrin to pop out to Cutshaw, but once more he was unable to find a weakness in Shorten, who drove out his third straight single and brought home Hooper with the Red Sox second run. Coombs appeared to be wavering, but in spite of his weakening he put over a strike on Hoblitzel. He followed with two balls, but Hoblitzel, obeying instructions from the Boston bench, hit at the next one on the hit-and-run. The offering was wide and Hobby only tapped the ball to Coombs, who had time enough to throw him out.

BROOKLYN—George Foster, whom Boston reported badly crippled and in no fit condition to contend for world's series honors, was the man Bill Carrigan called upon to side track all further efforts by Brooklyn's hard-hitting representatives. He started off poorly by giving Coombs three balls and one strike, but the next cut the inside corner for the second strike, and on the succeeding offering Big Jack hit on a line to Scott. Myers waited for two and two, and then hit under the next, raising a pop to Gardner along side of third base. After one ball had been called, Daubert crashed against a speedy one and drove past Lewis to the left field fence. First, second, then third base were left behind him and he started for home just as Lewis recovered the ball and started to relay it to Scott. It seemed certain that Jake, on the occasion of his third hit, was about to register the second home run of the series, but something happened. What it was the crowd could not grasp. But Daubert slowed down and when still a good distance from the plate started to slide. Scott, who went out to take Lewis's throw, made a true peg to the plate. Daubert slid home in a cloud of dust and Hank O'Day decided that he had beaten Scott's throw. But Hoblitzel, who had come in to back up Thomas on Scott's toss to the plate, saw that Daubert had never crossed the plate, and, while the Brooklyn Captain was still prostrate on the ground, called O'Day's attention to the fact. Even while the protest was being made it seemed as if Daubert still made no effort to put his feet on the rubber, and the umpire reversed his verdict and declared Robins' leader out. There was a vehement protest from the Brooklyn players, who swarmed on the field and surrounded O'Day, waving their arms and throwing their caps into the air. Daubert was out, nevertheless, and the decision appeared fair.

Seventh Inning.

BOSTON—Two consecutive strikes were called on Lewis, who had made no trouble for Coombs up to this time, and after a ball he hit mildly down the first base line Daubert beat him in the race for the bag. This was just a little calm before the storm. Larry Gardner gave no inkling of the tremendous blow he was to get in at this stage as he stood up and took first a strike and then two balls. But when Coombs put the next one just where he wanted it, Larry drove the horsehide far over the right field fence into Bedford Avenue, and Stengel gaped sadly at the globule as it sailed out of the park for a home run. This blow, which gave heart to the Royal Rooters of the Red Sox, sounded the passing knell of Coombs, who of his own accord waved to Manager Robinson that he was through. Coombs knew that he was weakening, as close observers of his pitching had realized an inning or two before. He took part in the conference of the Brooklyn strategists, however, which ordered Jeff Pfeffer from the warming-up pit to the centre of the battlefield. There was a certain uneasiness about Brooklyn fans as Pfeffer started pitching to Scott, but the big fellow was much more confident than he was last Saturday in Boston when he relieved Marquard. He dropped the first ball into the hollow of Miller's glove for a strike. His next was a ball, and then Brooklyn's adherents squirmed and turned while Myers was pursuing a long drive from Scott's bat far into centre field. Myers is at his best when chasing these hard blows, and after a winding run he pulled the hit down just when Brooklynites could imagine it clearing his head and going for three bases. With his first opponent out of the way, Pfeffer then set about his task with a more businesslike air, and after giving Thomas two balls he proceeded to strike out the Boston catcher.

BROOKLYN—Foster did not encounter any trouble from Stengel, who first took a strike, then a ball, and then fouled back of the catcher, after which he filed out to Hooper. Wheat gave the first ball a rapid-fire ride to right, and Hooper, although he got his hands on it, found the drive too hot to handle and dropped it, giving Zach a single. While Cutshaw was at the bat and had one strike called on him, Wheat started to steal second. Foster made a wild pitch, which rolled only a short distance back of Thomas, and Wheat reached second, receiving a stolen base because he had started before Foster's pitch. Cutshaw then sent a fly soaring just back of second base, and Janvrin, Hoblitzel, and Hooper gave chase. Only one man could get it, however, and as Hoblitzel was the first there, he accepted the out just before Janvrin and Hooper pulled up to avoid a collision. Mowrey hit to Foster, who made a bad throw, but was saved from an error when Hoblitzel picked the ball out of the dirt in front of first base.

Eighth Inning.

BOSTON—Foster watched the first go by for a strike and the next for a ball. At the third toss he made a back-breaking lunge, only to miss. He had two more balls called on him, but Pfeffer steadied in the pinch and bent over a third strike. Hooper made two fouls and was credited with one ball before he bounced a gentle hit to Pfeffer, who threw him out at first. The big fellow was working with full steam aboard, and one after another he put over three strikes on Janvrin.

BROOKLYN—Olson slashed what appeared would be a single toward the pitchers' box, but Foster jumped about three feet upward, pulled it down, and then threw to Hoblitzel, catching Olson with yards to spare. After one ball had been called on Otto Miller, he started a series of fouls to all sections of the stand which numbered four before he hit to Hobby, who tossed him out to Foster. In covering the bag, Foster made a fine stop of a high throw by Hoblitzel, and just descended on the bag in time to gain the decision over Miller. The next ball Foster pitched was slammed by Pfeffer against the right field wall, but the heavy footed pitcher drew up at first on what should have been a two-base hit. Myers could do nothing to advance Pfeffer, however, striking without effect at the first two pitches, and then fanning after two balls had been called.

Ninth Inning.

BOSTON—Down in the ditch for the first time in the series, the Sox started their last stand when Shorten, who on three previous occasions had hit safely, waited for two balls and a strike and then blazed a long foul to left field. Wheat, galloping at full speed, disregarded his personal safety and tumbled almost into the left field bleachers to haul down the foul for the initial out. Pfeffer played the inside for Hobby, and sent over a strike, but shot the next one wide for a ball. Olson then put a further damper on the Sox chances for getting the one run they needed to tie—a margin by which they have won six world's series' games—when he made a fast pick-up of Hoblitzel's grounder and disposed of him with the assistance of a fine stop by Daubert. The last vestige of Boston's hope for three straight victories died out when after one ball had been called Lewis filed out to Stengel. Pfeffer had gone through the last two and two-thirds innings without granting Boston a hit.

ARMY'S BACKFIELD GOOD.

Special to The New York Times.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Oct. 10.—The Army got back on the gridiron for its heavy work this afternoon. The men are in good shape after the Washington and Lee contest of last Saturday. Vidal is limping, but will be in the line-up this week. Hard scrimmages are planned for each day until Friday in preparation for the Holy Cross game, which comes next on the schedule.

The visitors are said to be adepts at open play, and this is a source of worry to Army coaches. The ends are showing strongly. Shrader is hardly in condition to play, but the wings are so well looked after by Ford, Mullins, March, and Cole that there is general satisfaction with conditions on the flanks. Cole, in fact, was shifted to half back today and looked good there. Ford will stay out on the wings, where he seems to have found himself. Maloney, a big plebe weighing 185 pounds, is looming up formidably as a half back. He has made the second string easily and is looked upon to make the 'Varsity if he keeps going. Place's fine work in Saturday's game assures him of a berth in the 'Varsity backfield, where, in combination with Oliphant and Vidal, the cadets look stronger than in many years.

RYZON Rice Popovers

2 level teaspoonfuls RYZON; 2 cups (½ pound) flour; 2 eggs; 2 cups (1 pint) cold boiled rice; 2 level tablespoonfuls (1 oz.) sugar; 2 cups (1 pint) milk; 1 level teaspoonful salt.

Mash rice until smooth. Sift flour, sugar, salt and RYZON together twice. Beat up yolks of eggs, add whites beaten to a stiff froth and stir them into the rice. Then add milk and flour alternately and beat until smooth. Have your pans greased and a little flour stirred into each. Fill each two-thirds full with the mixture and bake in a hot oven for fifteen minutes. Serve hot with butter or maple syrup. Sufficient for twenty popovers.

MAYS OUTGUESSED, SAYS FULLERTON

Yet Victory Should Have Come to Robins in Third Game by Larger Score.

SCOTT'S WORK WONDERFUL

By HUGH S. FULLERTON.

Brooklyn was doped to win yesterday by a score of 7 to 3, with Jack Coombs pitching against Carl Mays. Brooklyn won 4 to 3, with the same pitchers and with neither pitching, which served to prove three things: viz., and to wit: that Boston has a ball club which is practically unbeatable by the present-day aggregations and, second, that the dope is right and, third, that you cannot dope the mind of a ball player.

Brooklyn should have won yesterday's game by a score of about 9 to 3. The three angles of the dope were all right. Boston got everything that it was entitled to get, and held Brooklyn three, perhaps four, runs behind what should have been scored.

There are two points in this game that upset the dope. First, Jack Coombs was scheduled to make a grand comeback. He was on his way, and his arrival time already was posted on all the bulletin boards, when Larry Gardner banged the ball clear over the right field fence in the seventh inning, and scared the Brooklyn fans. Coombs was withdrawn and Pfeffer was sent to the rescue. No rescue was necessary, but it made Mr. O. Holiday Ebbetts feel about $2,000 better, prolonged the series one day, and gave the Brooklyn bunch one more day of hope.

Next Two for Red Sox.

Don't forget that they will be licked, and licked good, today, and that they will get kicked tomorrow, but yesterday they saved the National League from being branded as a semi-professional organization, and in the guessing match your Uncle Wilbert Robinson was there. He guessed just when to pull stuff, and he guessed just when Coombs had ceased to come back and was on the return route.

Yesterday in the first inning Brooklyn started to swarm upon Mr. Carl Mays. In the first place Mr. Mays is rather a joke as a pitcher. He has a "swift" one, which he pitches somewhere from his shoetop, and he has a curve. He also has a catcher. In fact, it looked to a lot of us that Carrigan pitched Mays because he did not like to work two left-handers in succession, and that he had no right-hander left. We figured that the Dodgers would swarm upon his underhand ball a mile a minute, and they did. But just about the time they reached the scoring point something stopped them. In the first inning they clogged the bases. Mays balled up two bunts and fielded one of them by accident, and was saved because Daubert made a great play to the plate. With Mowry at bat, the bases filled, and two out, Mr. O'Day called two balls, each of which looked like strikes from the grandstand. Then Mike stood still and watched a ball shoot through the heart of the plate wrist high.

It was a game that was played and pitched just as true to dope as dope can be true to truth. The Red Sox hit Coombs exactly as they figured to hit him; high up and far away. But Robby has some fielding outfield and they showed a lot of ability to catch flies and throw balls that did not go safe.

Scott in Best Form.

Where the Red Sox demonstrated their superior ability was at short—strange as it may seem. At every point of the game where they were about to make a flock of runs, some one hit a ball at Everett Scott. It is bad judgment to hit a ball at Scott when there is a pinch. For Scott holds his job by ability to field, and yesterday he fielded wonderfully.

Boston was hitting the ball high and far, but in the air. Brooklyn was hitting it hard and solid and besides that was outguessing Mays or allowing him to outguess himself. The Dodgers never were getting what they were entitled to get in the way of runs; first because of the pernicious activity of Everett Scott, who insisted upon making grand plays just when they ended innings, and, second, because Brooklyn never gets the percentage it is entitled to get.

Brooklyn climbed all over Mays right from the start. The dope indicated that a team that had hit Fred Toney's "swift" and had mauled Pat Ragan's underhand ball, and had hit Alexander's side arm with fair effect would not have much trouble batting Mays. Because they did not take full advantage of their opportunities they scored many fewer runs than they should have done, but, as they scored enough to win, what is the difference?

Daubert's Play Poor.

Jake Daubert pulled the star bone of the series. All he had to do was to get up, dust his trousers, and make the score 5 to 3 instead of 4 to 3. As a final result, it makes no difference, but with Hooper, Lewis, and those fellows coming to bat it does not sound like safety first. Jake's failure to call for a porter or some one else to brush him off, came in the sixth, when the final result did not seem as certain as it did last night. He hit a vicious drive down the left field line, which got past Lewis and went out toward the bleachers. He sprinted wildly around the bags, slid to the plate seconds ahead of the throw, and remained there. All he had to do was to jump to his feet and go to the bench.

It was evident to us experts that Thomas had made a grand play and had blocked him away from the plate, but to the hoi polloi it seemed as if he had scored. Instead of dusting his breeches and letting it go he remained there, with Thomas's ample leg between him and the plate while O'Day secured a tape measure, a rheostat, a thermostat and several other instruments, inspected the leg position of the players and decided that Jake was out by one and one ninth inches. While it made no difference in the final result it knocked our dope out by two points and it kept him from being a hero in Flatbush, because it prevented it being recorded that he made a home run.

From the day's development it appeared that the only result has been to add a few thousand dollars to the coffers of Ebbets and make us work another day. In defeat the Boston team looked better than in victory. It came near winning a game which ought to have been lost three to one and that is the answer.

In spite of this Brooklyn is widely excited, and don't forget that today is a feast day and that tomorrow is Columbus Day in Boston. Which may be the reply as to why Mays pitched yesterday.

FELTMAN MAY BUY DODGERS

Restaurateur a Possible Purchaser if Ebbets's Terms Are Right.

If the Brooklyn National League Club is put on the market, a probable purchaser may be found in Charles L. Feltman, the Coney Island restaurateur, provided Charles H. Ebbets and the McKeevers, Directors of the club, do not demand too high a price.

Mr. Feltman has already discussed with Mr. Ebbets the sale of the National League champions. Some time ago Mr. Ebbets threatened to retire from baseball if his team ever got into a world's series, and now that such an event has taken place it is just possible that the head of the Brooklyn club may fulfill the threat.

Edward McKeever, one of Ebbets's partners, asserted yesterday that the Brooklyn club could be purchased for $2,000,000. This would give the Directors a profit of $500,000, because the franchise is worth at least $500,000, he said, and the Ebbet's Field plant cannot be duplicated under $950,000.

Feltman admitted yesterday that he had talked with Ebbets over the prospective purchase, but that nothing definite had been accomplished. Mr. Ebbets said he had met Feltman in Boston and discussed the sale and had named his price.

Horse Show for Smithtown.

Strong classes of polo ponies and hunters will be the features of the Smithtown Horse Show, which will be held next Saturday. The show will mark the opening of the season in that section of Long Island and will be an all-day affair, with morning and afternoon sessions. The districts around Islip and Smithtown contain many first-class polo ponies, hunters, and saddlers, and there is great rivalry among the local owners for possession of the blue ribbons at the annual show.

GOLF PROFESSIONALS INDULGE IN MATCH PLAY

PRO GOLFERS MEET IN TITLE MATCHES

MANY FAVORITES SURVIVE

Hagen, Barnes, and Alec Smith Winners in Opening Tilts of Professional Golf Association.

The match play tournament for the championship of the Professional Golfers Association and the Rodman Wanamaker prizes began yesterday over the links of the Siwanoy Country Club at Mount Vernon. This is almost the first big tournament of its kind that this country has ever seen, and even in the play of the first round it gave evidence that it will bring out some of the finest matches ever contested on the golf courses of America. All the favorites for the title came safely through the day's play, with the match between Jim Donaldson of Glen View and Bob Macdonald of Buffalo attracting the largest gallery.

The big braw Scotchman from Buffalo defeated Donaldson, 3 up and 2 to play, in a match that was close and sensational from the first tee to the last green. The Glen View pro lead by 1 up at the conclusion of the morning round, but this slight advantage was removed early in the afternoon and the match continued all square until Macdonald won three holes in quick order near the end of the second round, clinching his victory with a good putt on the sixteenth green. The troubles of the long-hitting Buffalo professional are only beginning, however, for this morning at 9:25 he is scheduled to encounter one Walter Hagen of Rochester, Metropolitan open champion, Western open champion, and winner of the Shawnee open tournament, who has serious designs on the Professional Golfers' championship for the season of 1916.

Hagen won his way into the second round by a rather easy victory over James Thomson of the Philadelphia Country Club, resting from his endeavors at the twelfth hole in the second round, where he halved the hole that made him the victor by 7 to 6. However, if the Metropolitan open champion plays the same game against Bob Macdonald that he produced in his afternoon round with Thomson yesterday he will retreat to Rochester a sadder and a wiser young man.

Long Jim Barnes, who is a league or two in advance of his fellow-professionals as far as this season's work goes, reserved a place for himself in the second round today by defeating George Fotheringham of the Indian Hill Golf Club by the wide margin of 8 and 7. His reservation plot is none too favorable, however, as the player he engages this morning is Alec Smith of Wykagyl, twice holder of the national open championship, and now playing in the style that brought him so many and such great honors in days past.

Smith was one of the accessories before the fact in one of the most peculiar matches of the day. He played Jim Ferguson of Spring Lake, and on the reputation that Smith holds in this country and the fame that the Spring Lake professional brought from Scotland with him it was expected that the match would be close from start to finish. To the utter astonishment of everybody concerned, Smith hove in sight about noon with a lead of 8 up at the end of the first round. The reason for the slight advantage can be stated in a few short but cruel words. Smith used his putter for putting, and Ferguson used his putter for driving. At missing the cup the Spring Lake professional broke all existing records, amateur and professional, for the Siwanoy course. He took 37 putts on thirteen greens.

Ferguson Plays Over Trees.

In the afternoon Ferguson began to play real golf, but Alec Smith had been playing it all day and saw no reason to stop when his opponent began. Thus it happened that the former national champion holed a fifteen-foot putt on the eleventh green in the afternoon and was 7 up and 7 to play. Then began the real play. A half was fatal to Ferguson. He had to win every hole to stay in the match.

Smith fell short of the twelfth green and Ferguson won the hole with a par 4. On the uphill drive to the thirteenth green the Spring Lake pro sliced his drive miserably and Smith drove over the green into a bunker. When Ferguson got up to his ball he found that he was stymied to the pin by one tall pine tree, two maples, and an oak, all close at hand, with the green just beyond them. Jim Barnes, who had won his match and was passing by, asked Ferguson how he stood. "I have this shot to stay in the tournament," was the answer, and pitching it over the four trees, he landed it within four feet of the pin and won the hole.

Still clinging to a forlorn hope, he won the fourteenth by pitching over another row of trees to the green, and he took the fifteenth through a lost ball by his opponent. He had won four holes in a row after he was dormie 7. Strenuous measures were needed to overcome this sort of an uprising, and Smith produced these strenuous measures after topping his drive from the sixteenth tee by holing out a thirty-five yard mashie shot that gave him a 3 and the match, 4 and 2.

McLean Surprises MacNamara.

One of the surprises of the day was the easy victory that George McLean of the North Hempstead Club gained over Tom MacNamara, New York, who last year topped all the professionals in the season's work. McLean won by the margin of 6 and 5, principally through his own good playing, but ably assisted by the fact that MacNamara's wonderful command over the putter was conspicuous for its absence yesterday. In spite of the late lamented efforts of Jim Ferguson on the Siwanoy greens, it is reported that Bob McNulty took no heed of the heinous example just ahead of him, and putted himself into defeat at the hands of Willie Macfarlane of the Hudson River Country Club, 10 up and 9 to play, by imitating the performances of the Spring Lake professional when within striking distance of the cup.

Louis Tellier of The Country Club, Brookline, was eliminated yesterday, 4 and 2, by Cyril Walker of the Wabash Country Club. Tellier got away to a poor start and was 2 down at the end of the first round. He never quite got into a winning stride, and Walker won by a comfortable margin. Wilfred Reid of Wilmington was another of the prominent entries to meet defeat at the hands of invaders from distant States. J. J. O'Brien of the Mansfield Country Club defeated the little Englishman, 1 up, in a match that was carried to the home green, where Reid lost out by taking three putts. The summaries:

UPPER HALF.—Tom Kerrigan, Siwanoy, defeated C. G. Adams, Santa Barbara Golf Club, 6 and 4; George McLean, North Hempstead, defeated Tom MacNamara, New York, 6 and 5; Alec Smith, Wykagyl, defeated James C. Ferguson, Spring Lake, 4 and 2; James M. Barnes, Whitemarsh Valley, defeated George Fotheringham, Indian Hill, 8 and 7; Willie Macfarlane, Hudson River, defeated Robert McNulty, La Grange, 10 and 9; M. J. Brady, Oakley, defeated James West, Rockaway Hunt, 7 and 6; Emmet French, York, defeated Eddie Towne, Oxford, 3 and 1.

LOWER HALF.—J. J. O'Brien, Mansfield, defeated Wilfred Reid, Wilmington, 1 up; George Simpson, Oak Park, defeated Walter Fovargue, Skokie, 6 and 5; R. G. Macdonald, Buffalo, defeated James Donaldson, Glen View, 3 and 2; Walter Hagen, Rochester, defeated J. R. Thomson, Philadelphia, 7 and 6; Jock Hutchinson, Allegheny, defeated Joe Mitchell, Ridgewood, 11 and 9; W. Brown, Springfield, won from F. Clarkson, Kansas City, by default; Cyril Walker, Wabash, defeated Louis Tellier, Brookline, 4 and 2; Jack Hobens, Englewood, won from Michael Sherman, Sioux City, by default.

HAUGHTON RUSHES TO HELP HARVARD

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 10.—The Harvard 'Varsity football team defeated the scrubs, 14 to 7, in an hour's practice scrimmage at the stadium this afternoon. Most notable of the day's developments was the appearance of Percy D. Haughton, '99, head coach of the Harvard team. Quickly following the defeat of the Crimson by Tufts, Haughton appeared on the field for business for the first time this year. About a week ago Haughton took an afternoon off from his duties as President of the Boston Braves and watched the 'Varsity team scrimmage with the scrubs. Today, however, he appeared in football togs and took active part in practice, although Coach Leary was in charge as usual. Haughton will take up his old duties as head coach from now on.

E. L. Casey and R. Horween did the scoring for the 'Varsity. After T. C. Thatcher had intercepted a scrub forward pass on the scrub's twenty-five-yard line, a couple of line plays brought the ball to the fifteen-yard mark, and Horween plunged through the right side of centre for the first score. Again with the ball on their opponent's thirty-five-yard line, Casey slipped off left tackle and planted the ball behind the goal. Robinson kicked both goals. Brown, end on the second team, made the scrub's score.

WOMEN IN MATCH PLAY.

Miss Lounsbery and Mrs. Stockton Among Winners on Knollwood Links

The medalist still survives in the women's invitation tournament at the Knollwood Country Club links. Miss Beatrice Lounsbery of Bedford won her way into the second round of match play by defeating Mrs. J. S. Irving of Englewood 2 up in a match that was closely contested to the last putt on the home green. Mrs. Leila C. Stockton of Somerville, who eliminated Miss Marion Hollins in the women's national championship at Belmont Springs, was another of the victors in the first eight, winning her match from Mrs. J. A. Moore of Sleepy Hollow by the margin of 4 and 2.

The putting contest in the afternoon resulted in a victory for Mrs. S. A. Herzog of Fairview. Mrs. J. S. Irving was a second, but she had to forego the prize in favor of Mrs. W. Chilvers of Dunwoodie, as she had won the foursome prize on the previous day. The summaries:

FIRST EIGHT.—Mrs. L. C. Stockton, Somerville, defeated Mrs. J. A. Moore, Sleepy Hollow, 4 and 2; Mrs. M. D. Peterson, Englewood, defeated Miss Gertrude Pickhardt, Englewood, 1 up; Miss Beatrice Lounsbery, Bedford, defeated Mrs. J. S. Irving, Englewood, 2 up; Miss Elsa Pickhardt, Englewood, defeated Mrs. T. C. Forrest, Knollwood, 1 up.

SECOND EIGHT.—Mrs. S. Weil, Fairview, defeated Miss L. Grant, Greenwich, 1 up; Mrs. S. A. Herzog, Fairview, won from Mrs. J. C. Barclay, Hackensack, by default; Mrs. A. Shoaf, Englewood, defeated Mrs. E. Benjamin, Century, 5 and 4; Mrs. Harold Minott, Bedford, defeated Mrs. G. W. Levy, Century, 3 and 2.

THIRD EIGHT.—Mrs. E. H. Peters, Greenwich, defeated Miss A. Allaire, Fox Hills, 5 and 4; Mrs. L. C. Ketcham, Fox Hills, defeated Miss Irman Waterhouse, Ardsley, 2 up; Mrs. R. Fincke, Bedford, won from Mrs. M. J. Bartholomae, Ardsley, by default; Mrs. W. S. Bird, Sleepy Hollow, defeated Mrs. William Chilvers, Dunwoodie, 3 and 2.

FOURTH EIGHT.—Mrs. G. Mager, Essex County, defeated Mrs. F. X. Sadrier, Knollwood, 2 and 1; Mrs. J. S. Todd, Knollwood, defeated Mrs. C. S. Waterhouse, Ardsley, 4 and 3; Mrs. E. S. Bayer, Century, defeated Mrs. E. N. Potter, Bedford, 1 up, (19 holes;) Miss Ethel Spearr, Knollwood, defeated Mrs. E. E. Silverneck, Forest Hills, 7 nd 6.

MISS BALLIN WINS TITLE.

Defeats Mrs. Wood in Final of West Side Tennis Tourney.

Miss Florence A. Ballin yesterday annexed the women's tennis championship of the West Side Tennis Club, Forest Hills, L. I., when she defeated Mrs. Rawson L. Wood in the final match of the Class A singles competition, in straight sets, 6—3, 6—0. This was the only match decided yesterday, as none of the competitors in the Class B division of the singles, or the doubles competition put in an appearance. Play in the tournament will be continued today.

DILLON SCORES KNOCKOUT.

Sailor Grande Takes the Count in Second Round.

Jack Dillon, the Hoosier "bearcat," last night at the Broadway Sporting Club of Brooklyn demonstrated that, besides defeating men much heavier than himself, he will not tolerate any familiarity from boxers of his own weight or thereabout. Sailor Grande, a California boxer of considerable reputation, essayed to oppose the Hoosier light-heavyweight for ten rounds, but about five minutes after the bout started was sprawled limp on his face, completely and decisively knocked out.

LONG SHOTS AT LAUREL.

Many Favorites Defeated at Maryland State Fair.

LAUREL, Md., Oct. 10.—For the first time since the Maryland State Fair meeting opened, players of long shots had a profitable afternoon, the reason being the downfall of a number of heavily backed favorites. Lohengrin, winner of the second race, paid $44 for $2, and Pickwick, in the third, was quoted at $43 for $2. The Carrollton Handicap, the feature of the card, went to W. P. Orr's Port Light, which defeated the imported Crimper, the first choice.

OSBORNE MAY STUMP TO DEFEAT WHITMAN

Friends Say He Will Charge the Governor Thwarted Prison Reform.

POSSIBILITY OF REWARD

Report That Seabury Would Make the Warden State Superintendent of Prisons.

Friends of Thomas Mott Osborne, who resigned as Warden of Sing Sing, said yesterday he would take the stump against Governor Whitman and speak in favor of the election of Samuel Seabury, the Democratic candidate for Governor. Although Mr. Osborne has not made any statement of his intentions, those close to him said yesterday that one reason for his resigning at this time was so as to be able to help in Mr. Seabury's election.

In resigning Warden Osborne made an attack upon Governor Whitman, accusing him of not playing fair in his scheme of prison reform, and it was said that this charge would form the burden of his attacks upon the Governor. It was said that Mr. Osborne had some particularly interesting data concerning Governor Whitman which he was anxious to put before the public in connection with his attempts at prison reform.

In taking the stump for the Democratic candidate Mr. Osborne, for the first time in several years, will line himself up squarely with the Democratic State organization. Heretofore he has been classed as an independent Democrat. If he comes out squarely for the Democratic ticket this year, however, it was said that Tammany would be willing to forget past differences and reward him. That Mr. Osborne had his heart set upon the appointment of Superintendent of Prisons was no secret, and if Mr. Seabury is elected it was said that Mr. Osborne might be appointed to that place.

Special to The New York Times.

OSSINING, N. Y., Oct. 10.—Warden Osborne was told today of the report that he would take the stump against Governor Whitman in the present gubernatorial campaign. He said:

"I have absolutely no plans for the future, and my resignation has no political significance."

GOVERNOR ON PRISON RULE.

Not Necessary to Swing from the Brutal to the Maudlin, He Says.

Special to The New York Times.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Oct. 10.—Governor Whitman declined to comment tonight on the resignation of Warden Thomas Mott Osborne. But in his address before the annual congress of the American Prison Association he uttered a word of warning in indorsing much that has been done for the betterment of convicts.

"In swinging away from the brutal," he said, "it is not necessary to swing to the maudlin. An extreme of punishment is no more dangerous than an extreme of mollycoddling. It is possible to think of the rights of the prisoner without forgetting the rights of society."

Announcing that he had not received Warden Osborne's letter of resignation, James M. Carter, State Superintendent of Prisons, declared that "the practical features" of the system established at Sing Sing Prison would be retained. He emphasized the word "practical."

Special to The New York Times.

SING SING, N. Y., Oct. 10.—Warden Osborne gave his reason for resigning to the convicts in chapel last night. There was no demonstration. Supt. Carter has consented to the employment of "lifers" and long-term men in the Controller's office, which is technically outside the prison gates, although it is part of the administration building.

RAILROAD WILSON CLUBS.

Brotherhoods Plan Campaign to Aid the President.

Special to The New York Times.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Oct. 10.—Leaders of the four railroad brotherhoods in Cleveland today set in motion a plan to organize Wilson clubs among the employes at all the principal terminals in the country. W. G. Lee, President of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, has issued a call to all members to join the club. President Lee's appeal reads in part as follows:

"It is unnecessary to say that if President Wilson is defeated the eight-hour law will be repealed or at least amended to meet the views as publicly expressed by Mr. Hughes, and if President Wilson is re-elected, with a working majority in the House and Senate, he will be in a position to carry out his proposed plan of legislation in the interest of the workers, as the Adamson law is only the beginning of what will be necessary to insure the wage-earning class of this country an absolute eight-hour day."

OUR MORALS ALARM JUDGE.

Florida Jurist Says He Might Be a Smuggler if He Lived Here.

Judge Sheppard of the Federal District Court yesterday sentenced Hans Edward Thompson, a dock clerk, and Fred Uffelman, a landing agent, to thirteen months' imprisonment for engaging in a conspiracy to smuggle jewelry into this country. Judge Sheppard is from Florida, and only recently came from El Paso, where living is somewhat cheaper than it is in this city. In passing sentence he said:

"This is not a place calculated to breed good morals. Considering the way a man is held up for taxicab fares and hotel charges, I can hardly blame him for trying to put one over once in a while. If I were in New York for ten years I think I might almost be tempted to beat Uncle Sam myself."

Later in the day Judge Sheppard's secretary explained that the Judge, having heard very good reports concerning the personal reputation of one of the convicted men, desired to show that he sympathized with him.

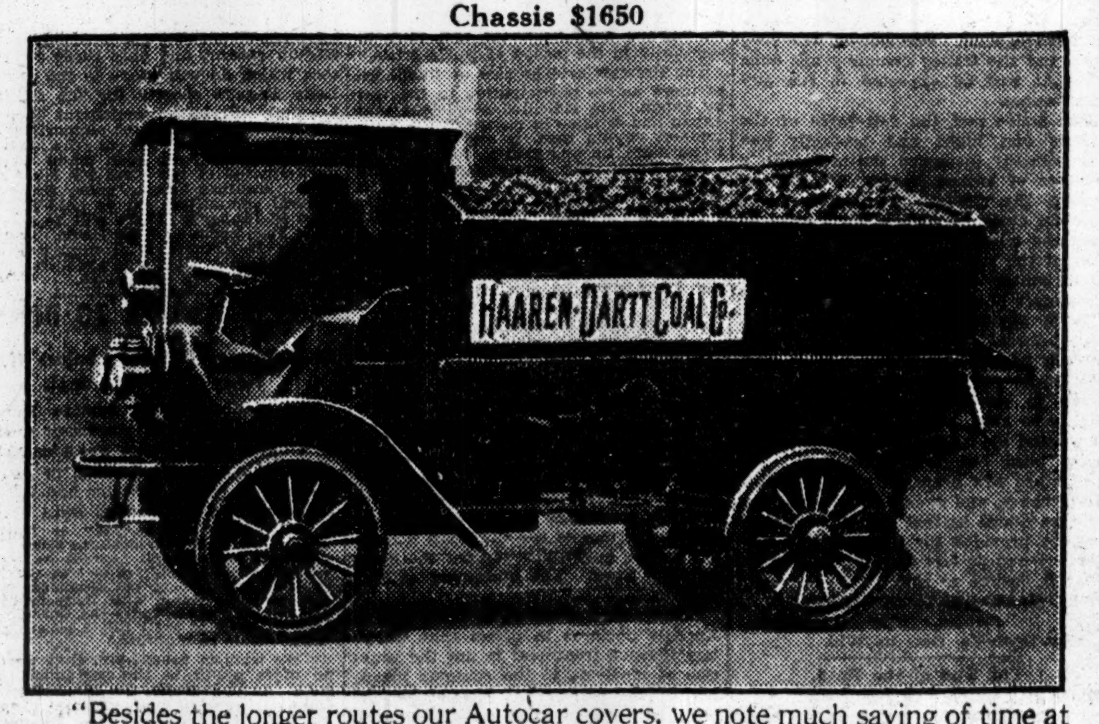
AUTOCARS HAVE STANDARDIZED DELIVERY SERVICE

Chassis $1650



"Besides the longer routes our Autocar covers, we note much saving of time at the place of delivery," says the Haaren-Dartt Coal Company, 552 W. 24th St., New York City. "The automatic power hoist lifts the body quickly to a good height and chutes the coal into most any place over a big distance. With a wagon the driver often gets tired when it is half way up and doesn't raise it high enough to chute quickly. He wastes time making deliveries, while the Autocar discharges its load and gets away in a few moments. Our car has given first class service in every respect."

More than 4,000 other concerns in all lines of business indorse the Autocar. Call on the Autocar Sales Company, 553-557 W. 23d St., New York City (Telephone Chelsea 6060), a Factory Branch of the Autocar Company, Ardmore, Pa., or write for illustrated catalog.

DUE DILIGENCE IN NEUTRALITY.

In the memorandum published yesterday the Allied Governments "urge "neutral Governments to take effec"tive measures, if they have not al"ready done so, with a view to pre"venting belligerent submarine ves"sels, whatever the purpose to which "they are put, from making use of "neutral waters, roadsteads, and "ports."

The submarine is a new craft to which old rules may not be applicable. But we may be perfectly certain that old principles of neutral obligation are still valid and binding. It has been very well said by a text writer that "it is a grave error to "suppose that neutrals are endowed "with large privileges and armed with "large powers to use or toss away as "they please. Their duty is to vindi"cate their neutrality." We insisted on that principle in the case of the Alabama. The second of the third rules laid down in the Treaty of Washington for the guidance of the Geneva arbitrators declared that a neutral Government is bound:

> Not to permit or suffer either belligerent to make use of its ports or waters as a base of naval operations against the other or for the purpose of the renewal or augmentation of military supplies or arms, or the enlistment of men.

Do we know the purpose for which the German submarine U-53 entered Newport Harbor last week? Was it to get information of the date of sailing from this port of important enemy ships, or the expected date of arrival of such ships westward bound? If that information was sought it might readily have been obtained from a copy of a New York newspaper handed to Captain ROSE with a seemingly perfectly innocent intention of acquainting him with the latest news. The information might have been of the greatest value to him, the very thing he needed for his purpose. Do we really know very much about the real German purpose in sending the Deutschland across the ocean? She did not appear to be a warship, therefore we treated her as a merchantman. Suppose another U-boat merchantman, the mysterious Bremen, should visit one of our ports. Could we with due regard to our neutral obligations permit her to take on an assorted cargo and depart on her return voyage? What means could we have of knowing that she was not carrying supplies to the U-53 or other German submarines that might be awaiting her not far from our coast?

The risk is that without our knowledge a visiting submarine, after accomplishing some secret purpose of her own in one of our ports, may, on reaching the open seas, immediately begin to take her part in operations of naval warfare, as the U-53 did after leaving Newport. The plea that we had been deceived would not now avail us against a demand for damages. We have been abundantly put on notice that the commanders of German U-boats are not above guile. The neutral is required to use due diligence to prevent the use of his ports as a base of operations. It would seem to be a part of due diligence to be vigilant against the practice of deceptions, accomplishing by trick what we very well know would not be asked for openly.

The matter is serious, for damages rapidly accrue when a U-boat turns loose. We have had our warning, and if we now fail to use due diligence the consequences may be exceedingly awkward. To grant the demand of the Allies would disturb old rules of practice, but it is necessary to remember that the foundation principle does not change, and it demands that we vigilantly safeguard our neutrality.

JUDGE AND CANDIDATE.

That was a pitiful and humiliating spectacle when CHARLES E. HUGHES, former Judge of the Supreme Court and now candidate for the Presidency, speaking to an audience in Philadelphia on Monday evening, stooped to explain a decision he had rendered while on the bench. Some representatives of "labor" have attempted to stir up opposition to Mr. HUGHES because he joined in the decision of the court in the Danbury hatters' case. Self-respect and due regard for the dignity of the Supreme Court of the United States require that Mr. HUGHES should pass over in silence every attempt to call him to account for his judicial decisions. In Philadelphia he explained, argued, went to the very verge of apology in demonstrating to his audience that it was his duty to join in the decision.

The justice and propriety of his acts on the bench will not be called in question by responsible and reasonable men, and to challenges of that nature from any quarter he is not called upon to reply. The Philadelphia incident is only another illustration of the deplorable precedent he set when he descended from the bench to accept a political nomination. Inevitably, the effect of it is to impair confidence in judicial decisions by arousing the suspicion that they may be influenced by political ambitions. A seat upon the bench of the Supreme Court should be a finality in any man's career.

MUMMIES.

When even Mr. ROOT, the ablest Republican, is so short of living issues that he has to forget the history of the United States and the map of the United States and assert that the Democratic Party "is national only in form and profession," what is to be expected of minor Republican advocates?

Mr. HUGHES is carrying on, in this age of independent voters, the old-fashioned partisan campaign. The virtues of the Republican Party, its innate superiority, are his theme.

In Nebraska the Hon. JOHN L. KENNEDY, the Republican candidate for Senator, pours out the sincere milk of antique Republicanism with a still more lavish hand. The Omaha Bee, a faithful Republican, exhibits Mr. KENNEDY in the act of "bringing forth a storm of applause" by this modest and reasonable and convincing patter:

> He stated that the Republican Party had always been and still is the party of principle rather than of personality, and that the principles of Republicanism were time-tried and true, and that one who campaigned upon them was never obliged to change front in a quarter of a century of campaigning for these principles, and that the Republican Party might be called the party of patriotism as distinguished from other parties which had their foundation in partisanship.

It sounds like stories from the land of spirits. The ghosts of old Republican platforms gibber: "The "party that freed the slave, saved "the Union," and so on.

The Old Guard is in control, the Old Guard of "principles" still at the front. What a peep into unprogressive, unmeaning, mechanical, Simon Pure Republicanism, into a contemporary past! A new generation is grown up. Unwrap for it the dear old Republican mummies.

Still, let us be grateful for good work, and the Republicans are doing a lot of it for Mr. WILSON.

A REPORT FROM THE DEPARTMENT OF PEACE.

Dr. MUENSTERBERG's report to Chancellor VON BETHMANN HOLLWEG reads like the report of a subordinate to his chief. In part it gives an account of his stewardship. "I hold it now to be "my chief task here to encourage the "pacifist sentiment now abroad"; "my main work consists in" the writing of articles favoring peace and urging President WILSON as "a mediator"; "all this peace material naturally appears without my name." As an officer in the field reports to MACKENSEN or as MACKENSEN reports to HINDENBURG on his military operations, as an officer of the Secret Service reports to his chief on his activities in the territory assigned him, as a diplomatic agent reports to the Foreign Office, so Dr. MUENSTERBERG reports his work for Germany's ultimate success in the department where he labors. It is his duty to aid Germany by arousing peace sentiment in the United States, and so he does his part in bringing about Germany's triumph, just as VON BISSING does his part in Belgium or the gallant VON SPEE upon the high seas—or, for that matter, the Captain of the Emden or the officer who sank the Lusitania.

No one will feel any great anger toward Dr. MUENSTERBERG. But what of the dupes of this Berlin policy, the Americans who have been unknowingly doing Germany's bidding just as surely as have the Prussians and Bavarians in the trenches, the dupes whose uncritical love of peace on all conditions has made them serve Germany's ends? In the Dobrudja, on the Somme, in the English Channel, in Armenia, in the Irish Sea, and here in America men have been laboring in many different ways, some with their eyes open and some self-deceived, to write forever into European history the triumph of the men who ravished Belgium, destroyed Serbia, and turned a peaceful continent into a grave for millions.

Dr. MUENSTERBERG's report shows, what no keen observer has ever doubted, the fact that the pacifist movement is a German movement, and that the men who embarked in it, whether they knew it or not, were laboring primarily for the interests of Germany, not of their own country. But he bears what he thought was sad testimony, what to true Americans must be glorious testimony, to the effect on the minds of the German-born citizens of this land. The cry of Germany first, he gloomily reports, is of less and less power in their minds. He has made "confidential inquiries in all the larger cities," and is "astonished at the uniformity of the reports" that the hyphen is waning and that German-born Americans are thinking more and more of their Americanism and less of their Germanism. This change is "sudden." Men of German birth are "accentuating their American tendencies." "The patriotic "wave has swept all the weaker ele"ments along with it"; even some of the leaders of hyphenism are cooling off toward the hyphen.

Now, it was last May when Dr. MUENSTERBERG reported this "most unexpected slump," as he called it, in the German cause. Since then the primaries in more than one State have shown that men of German birth have had their second thought, have decided to discard the advice of their self-constituted leaders and put America before Germany. "Where were the German Republicans?" sorrowfully asked the Staats-Zeitung after the astonishing vote given to ROBERT BACON. Where is the influence of the Staats-Zeitung and of the other papers which have believed all German-born Americans to be political hyphenates? Dr. MUENSTERBERG answers: "The Ger"man-speaking periodicals represent "the small circles and factions only, "and they have less support today "[last May] than even two months "ago." By this sad and unwilling testimony we learn that the German-born have been libeled by their spokesmen, that they are American first and German afterward, whatever they may have seemed in the first excitement of the war, that the heart of the American is in America, wherever he was born.

Dr. MUENSTERBERG's hope that President WILSON could be cajoled into becoming a tool of the German campaign for peace is founded on a psychological study of the President that will interest him. The hope rests on the belief that the President is a man whose vanities and antipathies can be played upon; that the mere fact that a man like ROOT took an opposite view could excite him and make him stubborn; that he could be "intoxicated"—"inspired" is the word Dr. MUENSTERBERG says he used, and is just as good—with the idea of "being the arbitrator of the world," and would find "an aesthetic pleasure in his unique rôle." Dr. MUENSTERBERG's psychology is not infallible; and most certainly this example of it will not be recognized as accurate at Shadow Lawn.

MEXICAN VAGARIES.

Bullfighting has been the foremost national pastime in Mexico. The toreador has been the people's hero. In Mexico City the vast amphitheatre is generally crowded at all notable exhibitions. There is no question in northern minds of the brutality and unfairness of the sport. A picador may be gored to death or crushed by his falling horse once in a while, but the poor bull has never a chance. The horses sent into the ring are doomed to slaughter. The smell of their blood seems to intoxicate the spectators. The seats in the lower tiers are the favorite ones; the nearer the Mexican can get to the carnage the better he likes it. Sober-minded observers have frequently argued that such exhibitions have been essential to the welfare of the State, as they have satisfied a craving of the people which would have found more dangerous outlets if bullfights were abolished. But CARRANZA has abolished bullfighting with a stroke of the pen, for various excellent reasons which commend themselves to the humane. He declares that they needlessly endanger the lives of men, torture beasts, provoke sanguinary sentiments.

The lives of men, however, have been needlessly endangered in many other ways in Mexico, ever since Father HIDALGO raised the flag of rebellion. There has been a veritable debauchery of killing. That disregard for human life continues. In Northern Mexico no decent man or woman is safe; and admirable as CARRANZA's decree against bullfighting is, a decree against assassination backed by force would be more timely. It is by no means certain that he can prevent bullfighting by making it illegal. Assassination is illegal in Mexico, but the northern assassins are unquelled.

Another remarkable manifestation of the awakening of the humane spirit among the Mexicans is the demand of the Republican Rationalist Party, which proposes to have something to say about the choice of a new Congress and the legislation to be enacted, for the abolition of capital punishment. Until lately it has been the Mexican custom frequently to put criminals to death without even the formality of a trial, and death has often been the punishment for trivial crimes. That the new movement is more than a mere bid for foreign approval will generally be believed. CARRANZA is undoubtedly sincere in his desire to suppress bullfighting and to turn the minds of the people toward gentler sports. In an era when illegal killing has not been suppressed, the Republican Rationalists honestly oppose legal killing. As a psychological manifestation this is interesting. As an indication of the development of a people toward a sound idea of self-government it may be compared with the transformation by the French Jacobins of the Cathedral of Notre Dame into the temple of their flamboyant Goddess of Reason. They revolted against years of misrule and iniquity in the Church as the Mexican leaders have revolted against the tyranny that substituted force and cruelty for justice and catered to the worst passions of the people in order to keep them in subjection. As a step in the upbuilding of a State it is akin to putting ornaments on the roof before the foundations are laid.

There is as yet no sign of the formation of a stable Government in Mexico. The rebellion against CARRANZA has not been suppressed. The country is liable for huge damages. Nothing is done to meet the requirements of the situation. CARRANZA's Commissioners fritter away their time in Atlantic City by persisting in their demand that we shall cease our precautions against invasions by murderous bands who refuse allegiance to CARRANZA and have vowed vengeance against us because our Government has recognized his authority. Before he takes measures to make his State ideal CARRANZA must endeavor to make it habitable and to establish its credit. When that is done, the actual suppression alike of bullfighting and capital punishment will favorably impress the rest of mankind.

WHEAT AND FLOUR.

The Government's October crop report reduces by 3,500,000 bushels last month's estimate of the yield of wheat. There are only 607,557,000 bushels, and we must have 625,000,000 to satisfy our own wants. But 160,000,000 bushels were carried over from last year's unprecedented crop, and this permits the exportation of about 100,000,000 during the current crop year. The average yield for five years immediately preceding last year's great crop was 728,000,000.

Europe bought 250,000,000 bushels of our wheat last year, and 338,000,000 the year before. She desires to buy 240,000,000 here and in Canada during the coming twelve months. But Canada's crop, like our own, is short, only 168,000,000 bushels, against last year's 376,000,000. At the current rate of shipment, the surplus that can be spared by both countries will be exhausted in a few months, for the average of exports for the last three months has been 8,000,000 bushels a week. For the last two weeks the quantities were 9,747,556 and 7,882,717 bushels. Persistence of the foreign demand can scarcely fail to make prices higher.

Nearly 60 cents a bushel has been added to the price of wheat here in the last three months, while the increase in the price of flour has been more than 50 per cent. Merchants say that our own people are buying food supplies of all kinds freely, owing to high wages and the prevailing prosperity. But a considerable further advance of wheat prices may cause a kind of automatic embargo—instead of the export embargo by statute which some demand—by reducing domestic consumption of wheat and leading to the use of substitutes, such as corn, of which there is at least a fair average crop. The cartoonists who assert in their pictures that wheat, flour, and all other kinds of food are in the hands of wicked trusts should "take a day off" and become acquainted with the facts.

THE INJURY TO THE SPURNED BEAUTY.

> From the beginning President WILSON has had no use for New England and no place for it in his single-track mind.
> Therefore New England is cold as frosty Caucasus's fonts, and will punish the President for his neglect.

The sad fact is that Mr. WILSON in some of his historical appraisements has ventured to insist upon the past, so often forgotten by Yankee writers, of Virginia and the South, of the Middle States, in colonial and national achievement. Now New England, with all her gifts and virtues, is a jealous mistress. Her children have written and sung a good share of American history. Her light has never been hidden under a bushel. She will be worshipped with no divided heart. How can ancient and rock-ribbed New Englanders like Dr. ELIOT, RICHARD OLNEY, and SIMEON E. BALDWIN forgive a man who doesn't habitually "put New England first"?

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Their Error Easy to Understand.

Something about the fallibility of human testimony, even when it is given by eyewitnesses in regard to whom the fair presumption of honesty is confirmed by the fact that they have no conceivable motive for falsehood or misrepresentation, is provided by one of the two "testimonials" that were signed by the passengers on the steamer Stephano. These good people, part of them British and part Americans, grateful for what, not without some reason, they thought a narrow escape from drowning, or at least from a most trying experience in open boats far at sea, wanted the Navy Department to know how admirably the work of rescue was done by the officers and men of the destroyers so promptly sent to their aid. It was also their desire that the owners of the Stephano should be informed of the skill and courage with which her commander had met the emergency which the appearance of the submarine created for him.

In the first of these documents, as nothing happened to be mentioned by its draughtsman which the passengers on a steamship were incompetent to judge, their statements were all as correct as they were well-intentioned. In the other, however, quite involuntarily, they went far astray and made against Lieut. Capt. HANS ROSE what is certainly a false charge. This they did when they expressed the desire "to attest to the magnificent work accomplished by Captain CLIFFORD and his officers when our ship was fired upon without a moment's warning."

If no other and no better witnesses were at hand, this statement, made by persons of good repute on evidence supplied by their own eyes and ears, would be accepted by any court, in all probability, as proving that the attack of the U-53 on the Stephano was as unlawful, and, in everything except its results, as vicious as that of the like craft that sent the Lusitania to the bottom. Captain SMITH himself, however, has revealed that the passengers were quite mistaken—that his ship was not fired at at all until after it had been deserted by everything alive on board except the ship's cat!

Obviously the error of the landsmen arose from the very warning which they thought was absent. In other words, they thought that the shots that caused the Stephano to stop were directed at her—that they had been under fire as they took to the boats. And they were not!

Mr. Osborne and His Resignation.

So frequently has there been expressed in THE TIMES high appreciation of the purposes with which THOMAS MOTT OSBORNE accepted the Wardenship of Sing Sing Prison, and so often has it commended the results achieved by him in the way of improving conditions in that once dreadful place, that there can be no question of the sincerity of this paper's sorrow over his resignation. There will be no rejoicing over his departure except by the enemies he made among politicians whom he deprived of patronage, and among the contractors from whom he took the unreasonable profits to which they were accustomed.

But it is not alone the resignation of Mr. OSBORNE that his friends and supporters will regret. As they read the explanation given by him for taking this step, they cannot but feel that its excessive emotionalism, in the vehemence of the charges he makes against the Governor, who stood by him at a time when the political pressure to put another man in his place was very strong, supplies something between an excuse and a reason for the criticisms of Mr. OSBORNE's methods that have been current ever since he took the thankless office of Warden. They have felt and feared the element of too-much in his methods, in the confidence he reposed in his prisoners, in his hope that practically all convicts could be turned by wise and kindly treatment into good or fairly good citizens.

All these were excellent qualities—qualities in most refreshing contrast with their opposites—the qualities out of which grew, and too long persisted, those ideas and principles of prison management, the inevitable fruits of which were and are brutality and corruption and the turning loose, at the expiration of his sentence, of practically every prisoner as a lifelong enemy of society. But excellent qualities can be carried too far, and when that is done it invariably gives the foes of reform their eagerly seized opportunity to attack it with some semblance of justice.

To have erred thus is less the fault of Mr. OSBORNE than his misfortune and the misfortune of the public he earnestly tried, far from unsuccessfully, to serve.

Desirable, but Not Probable.

A long, hard fight, with victory rather to be hoped than expected, is that which the County Medical Society promises to make against the sentence in New York's excellent Medical Practice act which forbids the application of its prohibitions and penalties to "the practice of the religious tenets of any church."

That sentence is the bulwark of quackery in its most obnoxious and dangerous forms, and it has been and will be vigorously and skillfully supported by all the influences that proved themselves powerful enough to get inserted in the law an exception which goes no inconsiderable distance toward making it ineffectual.

The elimination of this clause is in every way desirable. With it out of the way, everybody would still be free to pray for the sick, for that is a privilege which no physician or association of physicians ever thought of denying or restricting. The only effect would be to put the practice of medicine, properly defined and as commonly understood, in competent hands.

THE NEW ROCHELLE STRIKE.

Mayor Griffing Announces That the Situation Is Under Control.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your editorial of this morning, referring to the resumption of trolley service in Westchester County as being a "sorry joke," is not correct, so far as New Rochelle is concerned. The trolley company and its very capable Superintendent are ready and eager to run more cars. The difficulty has been in furnishing adequate police protection for the men who wish to work.

With a small police force and a large number of rioters waiting for an opportunity to rush the cars, progress is necessarily slow. The rioting was very real, and the trolley company has done all that can be expected in the circumstances.

Our police met the full force of the rioters last night and promptly and energetically dispersed the mob with a number of broken heads. We are arresting the ringleaders as fast as we can get evidence as to who is committing the felonies. We are now in control of the situation, and will suppress disturbances with all necessary force, no matter how many rioters are hurt.

It is obvious that, with our small police force, we cannot, at first, adequately protect very many cars at once. We must protect both the men who want to work and the public which wants to ride. The public stated that it wanted the trolleys back; so far there have been but few passengers. The police are now prepared to stop further disturbance, and from now on more cars will be added as fast as full protection can be provided for the men and passengers and as fast as the public shows that it desires to ride.

EDWARD STETSON GRIFFING,
Mayor.

New Rochelle, Oct. 10, 1916.

The End of the Raid.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I venture to predict that there will be no more torpedo attacks by the German submarine U-53 in the vicinity of the American coast. The capacity of this submersible warship is ten torpedoes. She no doubt has fired all ten, so that her activities are at an end.

It will be easy enough now for Germany to keep all the pledges she has made, and promised by Bernstorff, and thus receive the acclaim that the German press will naturally insist is her due, provided there is no base of supply to draw upon. If that happens to be the case she will go right along legally attacking enemy ships outside the three-mile limit, but I stick to the original prediction, viz.: that we have heard of the last attack in American waters by this particular submarine.

DESIRES OUR FRIENDSHIP

Contemplates No New Steps in Immigration or Philippines Problem —Can't Close Door to China.

TOKIO, Oct. 10.—The fears of a section of the Japanese public, which have found an echo in the United States and China, that the coming into power of the new Ministry may be tantamount to war were discussed frankly today by Premier Count Seiki Terauchi in giving to The Associated Press the first statement he has made in regard to the foreign policy of his administration. The Premier gave expression in a sentence to the spirit which he declared would animate his dealings with other nations. It was the assertion that Japan would not take any aggressive step toward the United States or any other country "so long as Japan's vital interests and dignity are not infringed."

"Any idea that I shall 'wave the sword' while I am Prime Minister of Japan is based on a false comprehension of my career and a complete misconception of the Japanese Empire, its past and its hopes and ideals for the future," he said.

The dramatic summons to the Premiership of Field Marshal Terauchi, Japan's dominating military figure, has excited a discussion overshadowed by no single event in modern Japanese history. In view of the worldwide interest in the significance of his appointment and the misgivings it apparently has caused, the Premier, who has long had the reputation of taciturnity, consented to break his silence and give to the world through The Associated Press a general idea of his purposes and policies. During the interview he conversed readily in French, and then in Japanese.

Wants to Promote Friendship.

"Tell the American people that my earnest and constant endeavor shall be to promote the friendly ties which have bound Japan and America for half a century. Your people know my administrative record in Korea. Because I am a successful soldier, shall that prevent my being a prudent Minister of State? Say it, repeat it, that I come as a statesman who is seeking the lasting interests of my people, not as a militarist seeking glorification by the sword."

The Premier disclaimed responsibility for the interview in New York with Baron Sakatani, who was quoted as saying that the repeal of American laws regarded by the Japanese as discriminatory against them was a matter of "justice and necessity." He declared emphatically that as Premier he would undertake no new steps in regard to the so-called American problems, including immigration. In this respect, he said, he would follow closely the policies of the outgoing Cabinet.

"What will be Japan's policy toward China?" the correspondent asked.

"As the Ministry was organized only yesterday, I have not discussed China with my associates," he replied. "However, speaking generally, Japan's ambition is to have China benefit, like Japan, from the fruits of world civilization and world progress. The Japanese and Chinese people have sprung from the same stock. Our future destiny is a common destiny that is historically involved."

Though he was unable to dwell on a detailed program, the Premier continued, he could affirm that America's interests in China would be harmed in no wise by Japan, which had no intention of violating China's sovereignty or preventing interested nations from having equal opportunities.

"People talk of closing the door," he said. "That is a complete non possumus. So long as Japan's vital interests and dignity are not infringed, Japan will take no aggressive step against any nation, especially America."

"Will the Japanese alliance with Russia be the basis of policy in the Orient?" he was asked.

Will Try to Maintain Faith.

"Japan, true to her obligations, naturally will be bound in her future policies by her alliances with Great Britain and Russia," he responded, "but that does not imply disregard of fostering amity with others, notably America, whose friendship and co-operation we have every reason to cherish. The empire faces a situation which demands strenuous and unified exertions to secure reforms of the national life, to nourish the strength of her resources, and to place the nation on an unshakable foundation of secure and lasting peace in the Far East. Our supreme efforts abroad should be to maintain faith with foreign powers and to be strictly fair and upright. Japan's progress as a world power, which is inevitable, must be marked with prudence and caution, especially in the period of world crisis."

The Premier said he saw no likelihood of more active participation in the war by Japan. He ridiculed suspicions that Japan had designs in regard to the Philippines, saying that, if any power was to be there, he was glad it was America.

Concerning the contention that the Cabinet was reactionary and that its creation was opposed to the rights of the people, the Premier said with military brevity:

"My appointment is in exact accordance with the provisions of the Japanese Constitution. Not revolutionary, not aggressive, not militaristic, but constructive—that is my program."

NO FEAR OF PHYSICIANS.

Christian Scientists Think Legislature Will Not Change Law.

The decision of the New York County Medical Society to begin a campaign against the practice of Christian Science brought forth last night a reply from Robert S. Ross of the Christian Science Committee on Publication for the State of New York. The statement said in part:

"The recent decision of the Court of Appeals declares in effect that Christian Science treatment is not the practice of medicine in the common meaning of the term, that prayer for the sick, if done in good faith, is not a crime and is permitted by the terms of the statute.

"Persecution is foreign to the spirit of the age in which we live. Public opinion loves fair play. It is safe to assume, therefore, that no matter how insistently the medical monopolists may demand it, the Legislature will never pass a law to compel sincere, law-abiding Christians to consult doctors or pass medical examinations in order to understand Jesus' teaching and thus qualify themselves through prayer to relieve human suffering."

SUCCOTH BEGINS AT SUNSET

Jewish Feast of Tabernacles Celebrated for Eight Days.

The Jewish festival of Succoth, or the Feast of Tabernacles, begins at sunset this evening, and the celebration will continue for eight days among the orthodox. This festival completes the cycle of important holidays which makes the month of Tishri so notable in the religious calendar of the Jews.

It is one of the three festivals known as the Pilgrimage Feasts, the others being the Passover and Pentecost in the Spring, in the celebration of which every adult male Israelite was, according to Biblical law, required to appear at Jerusalem and bring his offering to the Temple.

Succoth itself lasts seven days, but to these days one more is added, known as Shemini Atzereth, or the Eighth Day of Solemn Assembly. Only the first and last days, however, are recognized as full holidays, the intervening days being regarded as semi-holidays. The orthodox Jews regard the first and second days and the seventh and eighth days as full holidays, and to these days there is a ninth day, of Rabbinical establishment, which is known as Simchas Torah, or the Rejoicing of the Law.

Succoth is primarily a festival of thanksgiving and a harvest feast, but it is also intended to be commemorative of the wanderings of the Children of Israel in the wilderness before reaching the Promised Land, during which they dwelt in frail booths and had no permanent dwelling places.

As a part of this commemoration at the orthodox synagogues booths are erected which are decorated with branches of trees, flowers, and fruits of the season, and in these booths a portion of the religious exercises takes place. In many of the places of worship the altars are also decorated with flowers and fruits of the season. In the ceremonies the palm branch, sprigs of willow and myrtle and the citron are brought in together in festive processions in the synagogues.

CREEDS UNITED IN HOLIDAY.

Christian Chaplains to Aid in Succoth Services at Border.

A novel turn to an ancient religious service will be given today when Methodist, Protestant, and Presbyterian army Chaplains will take part in Jewish observance of Succoth, the Feast of Tabernacles, which begins at sundown tonight. Chaplains Gavitt, Dixon, and Stull will take part in the services in the Young Men's Hebrew Association Building in Douglas, Ariz., under the auspices of the Army and Navy Committee of the Young Men's Hebrew and Kindred Association Council.

Rabbis sent to the Mexican border for the holidays by the Army and Navy Committee and by the Central Conference of American Rabbis will conduct the services. The Army Chaplains will contribute short sermons on the message of the day. At other places along the border similar co-operation will take place, particularly at McAllen, El Paso, San Antonio, Brownsville, Laredo, and Eagle Pass.

Elsewhere along the 2,000-mile line at the border Succoth will be observed out of doors or in tents, which will prove peculiarly appropriate in view of the fact that Succoth celebrations are held whenever possible in out-of-door booths, in token of the harvest origin of the holiday.

Other observances under the auspices of the Army and Navy Committee will be held at military and naval posts and stations all over the country, particularly at Madison Barracks and Forts Totten, Wadsworth, Hamilton, Hancock, Terry, Monroe, and Myer.

An appeal is made to the public for funds to carry on the work of the Army and Navy Committee. Hitherto all the expenses have been paid by a small group of men who undertook to finance it while it was in the experimental stage. In two years the work has multiplied beyond the means of the committee. Funds may be sent to the Chairman of the Army and Navy Committee, S. S. Rosenstamm, 61 Broadway.

FOR RELIEF OF ALL ALLIES.

National Committee Will Hold a Bazaar for Sufferers Everywhere.

In the Magazine Section of THE NEW YORK TIMES of Sunday, Oct. 8, the statement was made that Captain Beith had been sent to this country to manage the British section of the allied bazaars to be held this Winter and that the general manager would be Captain Norman Thwaites. The officials of the National Allied Relief Committee of New York have notified THE TIMES that this is inaccurate as well as the statement that the proceeds would be used for the fund for the widows and orphans of sailors directed by Lady Beatty, daughter of the late Marshall Field and wife of Admiral Beatty, and for Lady Paget's military hospital in the South of England in addition to her fund for blinded soldiers.

The bazaar to which reference was made will be held in Boston from Dec. 9 to 20 under the auspices of the Massachusetts Branch of the National Allied Relief Committee of New York City. Herbert Jacques of Boston is head of the committee in charge. The funds will not be used for any particular charities, but for relief in all allied countries and also for sufferers in Poland and Armenia.

The committee also explains that Lady Beatty's organization has not voiced its intention of actively participating in the Boston bazaar, and only those committees which do will share in the profits. Lady Paget's charity for the military hospital will be a participant through the American committee supporting the military hospital, but at the present time no plans have been made for the participation of her fund for blind soldiers. Another bazaar under the same general committee will be held in Chicago in January. There will be a large New York section in the Boston bazaar. Joseph H. Choate is Honorary President and John Moffat is executive head of the New York committee.

ASK MARSHALL TO DENY.

Civil Service Reform League Questions Vice President.

The National Civil Service Reform League made public yesterday a copy of a letter sent to Vice President Marshall asking him to confirm or deny a newspaper report that he had said in a speech at Terre Haute, Ind.:

> Did I say "civil service" or "snivel service"? They both mean the same. We found the offices well guarded by snivel service, and our only regret was that we couldn't pry more of the appointees loose and fill their places with Democrats. If there is any office under the Government that a Democrat can't fill, I believe that office should be abolished.

"We wish to assure you that we give no more credit to the statement than such a paragraph in a newspaper article deserves," the letter says, "and we have not received any intimation from any other source in regard to this matter. But we wish to be in a position to deny authoritatively that the Vice President of the United States has, during his term of office and as a candidate for re-election expressed such hostile views toward the merit system as this newspaper article alleges, and therefore write to you in the hope of receiving from you such an authoritative statement that we can use."

John L. Walsh for Justice.

John L. Walsh, former Commissioner of Weights and Measures, was nominated last night at a joint session of the Democratic County Committees of New York and the Bronx for City Court Justice to complete the unexpired term of Justice Richard T. Lynch, who recently resigned and went West.

DECISION EXPECTED ON BORDER PATROL

LANSING UNABLE TO ATTEND

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Oct. 10.—The American and Mexican joint commission, which held no joint session today, will meet tomorrow to discuss plans for the patrol of the border which at last have been put into definite shape.

The American commissioners spent several hours today in conference with Major Gen. Tasker H. Bliss, in order to decide in favor of one of the plans. Secretary of State Lansing, who is at Shadow Lawn, was asked by Commissioner Lane to come to the Hotel Traymore tomorrow to confer with them, but it was found that he would be unable to comply with the request. The preponderance of military opinion is in favor of the withdrawal of the Pershing expedition from Mexico on the ground that the troops now are useless there.

The American commissioners have assured the Mexicans that in spite of reports to the contrary, the withdrawal of the Pershing expedition is not contingent on Mexican internal reforms or Mexican foreign policy, but simply and solely on the safety of American lives and property along the border.

"Catch Villa, and the border problem is practically solved," is the advice which the American commissioners have given in one form or another again and again to the Mexicans.

The argument on the question of catching Villa marches on a treadmill. The American commissioners say that the Pershing expedition could be withdrawn promptly if only he were captured. The Mexican response is that Villa would be caught, except that the Mexican Government has been forced to dispose so many troops in the north on account of the threat against Mexican sovereignty which the Pershing expedition is said to constitute.

The capture or death of Villa, however, is no longer an indispensable condition preceding the withdrawal of the Pershing expedition. If the American commissioners are satisfied of the power and will of Carranza to cut off Villa from further raids to the northward, there is nothing to prevent an agreement on some form of border patrol.

Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor, at a conference today with the Mexican commissioners urged a change in the method of dealing with strikes under the Carranza Government. When the street car and electric light employes threatened to quit in Mexico City Carranza revived a law passed under Juarez to enable him to deal summarily with strikers who were crippling the organization of forces to fight Maximilian. Under this law any man who struck or threatened to strike was liable to the death penalty.

The Mexican commissioners explained to Mr. Gompers that the Carranza decree had been promulgated for the sole purpose of tiding over an emergency, and that it probably could be remedied should organized labor in Mexico show a little more consideration for the wishes of the Carranza authorities. They further stated that the decree deprived only employes of public utilities of the right to strike and did not aim at the principle of protest.

In addition to the single protest against this decree Mr. Gompers put in a word for a free press and the right of assembly and free speech, of which the laborers of Mexico have been deprived by Carranza under one pretext or another.

Mr. Gompers, who has published in The Federationist letters and telegrams to show that he was instrumental in inducing President Wilson to recognize Carranza, and later that it was he who induced Carranza to free the American prisoners captured at Carrizal, also advised the Mexican commissioners that it was essential to their cause to come to an agreement with the American commissioners with the least possible delay, while they were sure of having in power an administration that had the friendliest possible disposition toward Mexico.

MUST OBEY SERVICE ORDER.

Court of Appeals Sustains Commission in Gas Main Extension.

The Court of Appeals, in a decision that has just been received here, holds that the courts have no control over the Public Service Commissions of the State, that an order given by either one of the commissions to a corporation must be obeyed, and that the courts may not overrule the order unless it violates the law. The opinion was described by lawyers yesterday as of the greatest importance because it places corporations absolutely within the control of the commissions, and any appeal for a revocation of an order or for its modification must be made directly to the commission.

An order of the commission in this district directed the New York and Queens Gas Company to extend its lines from Bayside across about half a mile of marsh to Douglaston and Douglaston Manor. The company obtained a writ of certiorari from the Appellate Division, and on March 9 last the opinion of this court was that the "facts presented by the record do not present a reasonable justification for the order."

The opinion of the Court of Appeals, written by Judge Cuddeback and concurred in by the other Judges, said:

"The Appellate Division did not have the power to determine that the extension of the relator's gas mains and pipes ordered by the Public Service Commission was unreasonable in the sense that it was an unwise or inexpedient order, but only that it was unreasonable if it was an unlawful, arbitrary, or capricious exercise of power. The court substituted its own judgment for that of the Public Service Commission in determining that the latter's order was unreasonable. This decision, if allowed to stand, will seriously hamper the commissions in the discharge of their duties, and go far toward defeating the efforts of the Legislature to establish agencies to regulate the great public service corporations."

The Appellate Division held that the cost of the extension to the company would be between $60,000 and $70,000, and the return in revenue would be only $1,660 a year, or only 2½ per cent. The Court of Appeals did not believe that this proved that the order of the commission was capricious or arbitrary.

A statement made by the Public Service Commission yesterday said that the matter might be carried to the United States Supreme Court by the gas company.

BERNHARDT ARRIVES CARRIED FROM SHIP

Famous Actress, Vivacious as Ever, in Spite of Her Loss of a Leg, Comes for a Tour.

FLOWERS STREWN IN PATH

Promised French Premier, She Says, Not to Appear in Any Play That Would Arouse Partisan Feeling.

Mme. Sarah Bernhardt, the great French actress, arrived here yesterday on the liner Espagne from Bordeaux with her company to make another tour through the United States and Canada. She looked as young and was as vivacious as she was three years ago on her last visit to this country. The only difference was that instead of walking down the gangway leaning on the arm of the French Consul, Mme. Bernhardt had to be carried from her room as the result of the accident in France fifteen months ago that cost her the loss of a leg.

Four sailors from Brittany bore her in a chair along the decks, while their shipmates stood in line and cheered their famous countrywoman. William F. Connor, her manager, brought on board several bunches of American roses and telegrams of congratulation from every French society in the United States and Canada and also from a number of American friends.

On the pier were a number of young girls with baskets of flowers to strew in Mme. Bernhardt's path. They were led by Mrs. George Kessler and Mrs. R. Valentine Webster, Secretaries of the Permanent Blind Relief War Fund, and in the background stood Sergeant-Major Robert Middlemass, the blind veteran of the Dardanelles campaign, led by his young wife.

As the actress did not wish to be carried through the big crowd of waiting people to the street on the upper pier, the agent of the French line arranged for her to be taken to where the taxicab was waiting by a freight elevator opposite the gangway. When the crowd saw this there was a wild charge in which the flower girls and a number of society women who had come to see Mme. Bernhardt land were mixed in a struggling mob, all trying to get to the elevator before the doors closed.

Flowers of all kinds from American roses to golden rod, were thrown in front of her and over the top of the elevator. Moving picture men and photographers hung on the steps of the taxi and had to be dragged off before the cab could leave the pier for the Hotel Majestic—about noon.

After resting a few hours in the hotel, the French actress left for Montreal, where she opens her tour tonight in "Cleopatra." She will begin her New York engagement at the Knickerbocker Theatre in the latter part of next month.

Mme. Bernhardt said that before leaving Paris she had promised Premier Briand not to appear in any play that would be likely to arouse partisan feeling. When asked about the danger of the submarine, she replied: "My star is still in the ascendant, and while it is high in the heavens I have nothing to fear. I feel young and take joy in living, for my spirit is young and will never die."

Because of her promise to Premier Briand, the actress said, she would not be able to play Rostand's anti-German piece, "Les Cathedrals," which has aroused such enthusiasm in France.

WOMEN'S TRAIN 'ROUND UP.'

Special to The New York Times.

WITH WOMEN'S HUGHES CAMPAIGN TRAIN, BILLINGS, Mont., Oct. 10.—Fully 1,800 persons were in the Bismarck (N. D.) Auditorium last night to attend a mass meeting arranged for the train speakers and presided over by Governor Hanna. The audience was friendly and the speeches were frequently punctuated by applause.

The Bismarck meeting was preceded by a luncheon at the Bismarck Country Club given by Mrs. Edward Hughes.

Miles City, a strongly Republican town of 7,000, in the heart of the Montana cow country, staged a "round-up" when the campaigners arrived there this morning to corral votes for "the Hughes ranch," the brand of which, according to James King, the only Democratic cowboy, is the hyphen. Fully fifty cowboys and girls greeted the tourists with volleys from revolvers. Up and down the station platform the cow punchers raced their bronchos, whooping for Hughes and banging away until a wild shot severed two telegraph wires and caused the rather pale occupants of the train to request an adjournment.

The campaigners went to the Elks Building, where for nearly two hours a responsive crowd of 500 heard speeches. Most of the performers had taken part in the round-up recently staged at Sheepshead Bay.

Later the spellbinders were taken to "the big grub pile at the L. O. chuck wagon," where the "pie card," or menu, read thus: Dough gods (hot biscuit,) Boston bullets (beans,) roast maverick (beef,) powder yams and Murphies (sweet and white potatoes,) and Moon Creek staybys (cakes.)

Billings, reached late tonight, is on the schedule for several meetings, and tomorrow speeches will be made in Helena and Butte.

F. E. Chester Weds Miss Ethel Wood

The wedding of Miss Ethel May Wood, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wood, of 54 Ray street, Jamaica, L. I., to Fred Elsbree Chester, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Chester, of Providence, R. I., took place at 8 o'clock last evening at the home of the bride's parents. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. George C. Fort, pastor of the First Methodist Church of Jamaica.

The bride was attended by Miss Anna Willets of Brooklyn, and Miss Louise Chester, sister of the bridegroom. Henry Martin, of New York, was the best man. After the reception Mr. and Mrs. Chester started on an automobile trip through New England. Mr. Chester is a mining engineer.

Meyers-Stern Engagement.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Meyers of 285 Central Park West announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Martha Meyers, to Lawrence W. Stern. No date has been set for the wedding.

SPHINX HONORS F. J. GIBSON.

Founder of Advertising Club Receives Gold Medallion.

Twelve ex-Presidents of the Sphinx Club, including Frederic James Gibson, its founder, sat at the speakers' table at the twentieth anniversary dinner of the association at the Waldorf-Astoria last night. They were M. M. Gillam, Artemas Ward, Herbert B. Harding, Frank Presbrey, Mr. Gibson, Samuel Brill, Phillip A. Conne, W. R. Hotchkin, George B. Van Cleve, Collin Armstrong, E. D. Gibbs, and Henry C. Brown. President Preston P. Lynn presided.

The Sphinx Club was organized by Mr. Gibson at a time when the value of advertising was comparatively little appreciated, and the history of its development was recited by the ex-Presidents, accompanied by personal experiences and witty reminiscences. Naturally, also, they talked of advertising.

"It isn't the man who sells advertising, but the man who buys it, who makes the money," was one of the verbal hits by Mr. Ward.

R. F. R. Huntsman, known from Maine to California among advertising men as "Our Bob," and who for the last eight years has been the Treasurer of the Sphinx Club, presented Mr. Gibson with a solid gold medallion. Upon one side were the words, "Twentieth Anniversary, Sprinx Club, New York," and underneath the dates, "1896-1916." On the reverse side in large letters had been engraved the word, "Founder." There was great applause as the medallion, attached to a purple satin ribbon, was hung about Mr. Gibson's neck.

JEROME D. TRAVERS TO WED.

Former Golf Champion to Marry Miss Dorris Tiffany Saturday.

Jerome Dunstan Travers, the golf player, and Miss Dorris Tiffany yesterday visited the Marriage License Bureau and obtained a license. The wedding will take place next Saturday evening at 6 o'clock in the First Presbyterian Church in Newburg, N. Y., and the ceremony will be performed by the Rev. F. F. Stockwell, pastor of the church.

The bride will have Miss Justine Weston of Newburg as maid of honor, and the best man will be Francis R. Henderson of Montclair, N. J. Mr. Travers's ushers will be his cousin, James P. Travers; the bride's brother, Humphrey Cuyler Tiffany, and Ralph R. Bay of New York and Arthur Swezey of Upper Montclair.

Miss Tiffany is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walton Cuyler Tiffany of Newburg. She was born in Newburg and lives at 120 Claremont Avenue. Mr. Travers is the son of Mr. and Mrs. V. P. Travers of Upper Montclair, N. J. He is a broker on the Cotton Exchange and lives at 420 West 116th Street. Mr. Travers has held the national amateur golf championship four times, and was once open champion. He is 29 years old and Miss Tiffany is two years his junior.

WEDS BUSINESS PARTNER.

Harry C. Michaels Marries Miss Banks and Surprises Friends.

Harry C. Michaels, head of the Harry C. Michaels Advertising Agency at 381 Fourth Avenue, gave his friends a surprise last week by slipping quietly out of the city and marrying his partner in the business, Miss Virginia Banks. The wedding took place on Wednesday, but beyond the fact of the successful termination of the romance, the members of his office staff do not know where the wedding took place or where the happy couple are spending their honeymoon.

It was all very sudden as one of Mr Michaels's friends explained yesterday, but he would find a hearty welcome awaiting him and his bride on their return next week. Miss Banks has been associated with Mr. Michaels in the advertising agency business for more than a year.

At Mr. Michaels's home in the Kenilworth Apartments, 151 Central Park West, his mother declined to give any particulars of the wedding, but said that the couple would reside on Gramercy Park.

MARRY AT RITZ-CARLTON.

The wedding of Henry Kaufman and Miss Eda Floersheimer, a sister of Samuel Floersheimer of 2 West Eighty-sixth Street, was celebrated at 6:30 last evening at the Ritz-Carlton, and the ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Stephen S. Wise.

The bride, whose brother gave her in marriage, wore a gown of cloth of silver, with a train of the same material, and a tulle veil held by point lace cap and orange blossoms. She carried lilies of the valley and orchids, and wore a string of pearls, the gift of the bridegroom. She was attended only by Miss Paula Chase, who was the maid of honor, and wore a pale pink net frock and carried pink roses. Mr. Kaufman had no ushers, but his brother, Albert Kaufman, was his best man.

The wedding ceremony was followed by a dinner for the relatives.

Daughter of Brooklyn Pastor to Wed Dr. R. B. Owen of Columbia.

The Rev. Dr. Joseph D. Burrell, pastor of the Classon Avenue Presbyterian Church, Brooklyn, and Mrs. Burrell have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Monica Burrell, to Dr. Roberts Bishop Owen of the Department of Philosophy at Columbia University.

Miss Frances Nash's Recital.

Miss Francis Nash appeared yesterday in Aeolian Hall for the first time in New York as a pianist, with a rumored backing of wealth and social position. An audience of some numbers heard her, and showed no inclination to resent these rumors, but listened considerately to her as to an artist. Her artistic powers in the higher sense are still undeveloped. She showed yesterday a very considerable fleetness and dexterity; what Sir John Hawkins called the "volant finger." She produces a pleasing quality of tone, but she has not much power, and not much capacity to vary and contrast the color and dynamics of her tone.

As for her interpretations there was not enough in them to distinguish, for instance, the essential quality of Bach's Chromatic Fantasy and Fugue from that of Sapelinkoff's "Dance of the Elves." She has not, in short, penetrated beneath the surface of the greater things. She has still to discover the poetry and passion of Chopin, and to learn that his "tempo rubato" does not involve the annihilation of his rhythm; and there remains to her the task of differentiating between sentiment and sentimentality. But there was that in her playing, in the evidences it gave of sincerity and artistic striving, to warrant the hope that she will still compass these and other things that will make for her artistic maturity.

123,945 REGISTERED ON THE SECOND DAY

Increase of 15,000 Over Second Day Last Year, but 1,000 Behind Monday.

249,069 IN THE TWO DAYS

Many Voters Complained of Being Turned Away When They Were in Line at Closing Hour.

The total registration for yesterday, the second day this year in all the five boroughs, was 123,945. The total for the first two days of registration was 249,069. Yesterday's total exceeded by about 15,000 last year's total for the second day. It fell behind the figures for Monday's registration by a little less than a thousand. The registration on the second day in practically every year is less than that of the first day.

All the boroughs showed a gain over the registration of a year ago. The falling off from Monday's figures was in Manhattan and the Bronx. The three other boroughs showed an improvement. The gain in the Republican districts still continued. This is not an unusual feature in a Presidential year. Here is a table showing by boroughs and assembly districts the registration yesterday, with the totals for the first two days of this year's registration, compared with the two days' total and the second day's registration a year ago.

Many Unable to Register.

Instructions were sent out yesterday to election district Captains all over the city to make a special effort to get the registration out, if necessary, by a post-card campaign. Green registration officers and defective police work were held responsible by the leaders for the slow registration and the tardiness in getting the figures.

Complaints came from voters everywhere that opportunity to register had been refused them although they were in the registration places before the closing hour. In some districts long lines of voters waiting to register were turned away by the registration officers, their errand unfulfilled.

The Progressive leaders yesterday, in an address to the voters of their party, publicly charged that Tammany was enrolling its henchmen in the third party with a view to obtaining control of the party machinery through a primary victory in time for the municipal election next year. The address was signed by former Progressive State Chairman William H. Hotchkiss, Jacob J. Lesser, William Stanley Miller, August F. Schwartzler, Bull Moose leader in the Bronx; Commissioner of Accounts Leonard M. Wallstein, and Jacob L. Holtzmann, the Progressive leader in Brooklyn.

Moose Fear Tammany Plot.

The address read:

> Evidence is not lacking of a purpose and plan to capture and capitalize Progressive prestige for Tammany ends. The further enrollment of Tammany Democrats as Progressives this week is likely to be an important step in Tammany's program of preparedness for the 1917 municipal election. This effort may be successful if bona fide Progressives shall now abandon their affiliations and leave the party as derelict prey to Tammany's schemes.
> More, enrollment in a State or national sense does not become important until 1917. Progressives may vote for country and State this year and be Progressives still. Their ultimate choice can be made on the registration days a year hence.
> So, today, this week, with eyes single to our duty toward securing decent city government again in 1917, let us, as New Yorkers, stand by New York, and, in anticipation of another victorious fusion campaign next year, enroll as Progressives now.

Miss Margaret E. Morse Weds.

BEAVER FALLS, Penn., Oct. 10.—Miss Margaret E. Morse, daughter of J. Seth Morse of 250 Riverside Drive, New York City, was married at Heath Manor, the home of her aunt, Mrs. Frederick N. Beegle of Paterson Heights, tonight at 8 o'clock to Dr. Charles Townsend Hamaker, son of Dr. and Mrs. William D. Hamaker of Meadville, Penn.

Charles M. Reubens Dies Suddenly.

Charles M. Reubens, 43 years old, a member of the firm of S. Reubens & Brother, dealers in metals and alloys, of 68 Cliff Street, and a prominent metallurgist, died suddenly last night in his apartment at the Hotel Marseilles, from an attack of endocarditis. He is survived by his mother, Mrs. Hannah Reubens; his brother Samuel of 215 West Eighty-eighth Street, and another brother, Julius, a jeweler.

INTERNATIONAL NEWS BARRED FROM BRITAIN

LONDON, Oct. 10.—The British Official Press Bureau tonight issued the following:

"The following statement is placed at the disposal of the press for publication:

"In the House of Commons on June 27, last, the Secretary of State for the Home Department stated that attention had been drawn to an alleged telegram relating to the Jutland battle, which appeared in certain American newsapers as having been sent from London by the correspondent of the International News Service. No such message was included in any telegram sent from this country.

"The Home Secretary referred on the same occasion to previous cases in which messages which purported to be from the London correspondent of the International News Service bore no likeness to the cablegrams actually dispatched.

"On the first occasion referred to the manager of the International News Service in New York gave categorical assurance that such an incident should not happen again. On the second occasion he made like promise, stating that orders had been given that extraneous statements should not be inserted in cable dispatches.

"On the third of September cablegrams were published in the United States purporting to have come from London 'By International News Service' giving various false statements about the air raid of the previous night. None of the statements in question was in fact contained in any cablegram dispatched by the London correspondent of the International News Service.

"In view of this continued garbling of messages and breach of faith on the part of the International News Service, the Secretary of State has directed that no representative of the International News Service shall be permitted to use the Official Press Bureau and that the agency shall be debarred from the use of all other facilities for the transmission of news until further notice."

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Wednesday, Oct. 11.—The Daily Chronicle commenting on the official ban of the International News Service, which it points out means depriving it of all telegraphic and mail facilities, says:

"It is obvious if such abuse were tolerated the censorship would become of less than no value since the American public is given the impression that our censor has passed statements which in fact he has never seen. The willful repetition of the offense renders inevitable the course which has now been taken. Needless to say, the decision to take it has nothing to do with Mr. Hearst's opinions. Mr. Hearst or any other controller of neutral newspapers is welcome to express whatever opinions he likes, but he is not welcome to print garbled dispatches."

The New York American this morning publishes a long reply signed by the manager of its International News Service to the British action in which he says:

"The English censors have been threatening for many months to deny the International News Service the privilege of the mails and cables because the International News Service did not print the kind of news that the English desired to have printed in this country.

"The International News Service has defied the censors and declared its determination to print the facts as nearly as it could find them, without regard to English preferences and prejudices.

"The English censors issue a statement saying that the International Service has been denied the mails and the cables because it has distorted the news. The facts of the matter are that the International News Service has been denied the mails and cables because it has not been willing to distort the news.

"It is the intention of the International News Service to continue printing the news, all the news, and nothing but the news."

Ceiling of Peking Palace to be Sold.

The covering of the ceiling of the Council Chamber of the Imperial Palace at Peking, where the envoys of the various nations settled the Boxer difficulties in 1902, is on exhibition at Silo's Fifth Avenue Art Galleries, to be sold with other things on Friday and Saturday of this week. The ceiling is formed of a magnificent piece of heavy corded yellow silk 21 feet 6 inches long and 19 feet six inches wide. It is embroidered, an imperial Chinese dragon in the centre, with others in the corners, and the ground is covered with embroidery in cloud forms. At the close of the session of the envoys in the Imperial Council Chamber, a representative of the Emperor informed them courteously that the contents of the chamber were considered profaned by the presence of the foreigners, and they were requested to divide among themselves the furnishings. The ceiling fell to the share of the American envoy.

WIFE GETS DIVORCE FROM C. M. SABIN

HOAX IN STORY OF PEACE?

Wall Street Hears Report That Associates "Put One Over" on Guaranty Trust President.

Friends of Charles M. Sabin, President of the Guaranty Trust Company, the second largest banking institution in the United States, were surprised yesterday when they learned that Mr. Sabin has recently been divorced by his wife, who prior to her marriage to Mr. Sabin, in December, 1897, was Miss Mabel Whitney of Albany. The interlocutory decree, which becomes permanent in three months, was granted by Supreme Court Justice Gilbert D. B. Hasbrouck of Kingston, who also granted to Mrs. Sabin the custody of Mr. and Mrs. Sabin's young son.

The suit was tried in Albany, and at its conclusion Justice Hasbrouck ordered the testimony sealed and filed with the County Clerk there.

Sabin was represented by counsel, but did not oppose the suit. The decree, it is understood, provides for a liberal alimony. Frank H. Platt of Platt & Field, 120 Broadway, represented Mrs. Sabin.

While friends of Mr. Sabin, who is the banker who gave out the interview last week in which he said that he had trustworthy information that Germany was about to seek peace through the mediation of President Wilson, were regretfully alluding to his domestic troubles, a story, also well founded, was going the rounds in Wall Street to the effect that several Wall Street friends of Mr. Sabin had "put one over" on him by telling him the story which Mr. Sabin subsequently told to the reporters he called to his office.

Mr. Sabin is one of the best-liked men in Wall Street, and also, according to some of his friends, inclined to be a little too credulous when it comes to putting a stop to wars between nations. At any rate, the story is that several of these Wall Street men, who thought it might prove to be a good thing for everybody concerned to turn pacifist and start a real up-to-date peace rumor, took Mr. Sabin into their confidence, and the talk to the reporters, the slump in Wall Street, and the denials of the accuracy of the report by both the American and German authorities followed.

"Charley Sabin," said a friend of the banker yesterday, "is one of the most likeable men in Wall Street, and also one of the straightest. He never would have given out that story if he had not been convinced that his information was reliable. Boiled down, the whole thing seems to be that somebody 'put one over' on Sabin."

MARRIED WHEN BANK CLERK.

Sabin Wedding Was One of Albany's Social Events in 1897.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, N. Y., Oct. 10.—Mrs. Sabin, who has obtained a divorce from Charles M. Sabin, is a daughter of the late William M. Whitney, who was one of Albany's most prominent dry goods merchants. Her marriage to Mr. Sabin, then an employe of an Albany bank, was one of the social events here in 1897.

Her brother, Charles L. A. Whitney, now head of W. M. Whitney & Co., was out of town tonight, and at his residence in Loudonville, it was stated that Mrs. Sabin's whereabouts were not known. Mr. Sabin, who is 48 years old, is a native of Massachusetts.

CARLSTROM'S TEST TODAY.

Special to The New York Times.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Oct. 10.—Although disappointed once more in his hopes of getting into the air with the aeroplane in which he expects to fly from Chicago to New York for THE NEW YORK TIMES, Victor Carlstrom believes he will be able to make his first trial of the machine tomorrow.

Expectation that the alterations in the machine would be completed today was disappointed when it was found that the gasoline tank which has been installed to hold the exceptional amount of fuel required for the long flight would need still further reinforcement. Once more the tank was taken out of the machine and brought back to the factory of the Curtiss Aeroplane Company on Churchill Street, and after the changes had been made was taken back to the field north of Buffalo late this afternoon for the third, and it is hoped, the last time.

The Curtiss aviation field was still heavy this morning from yesterday's rain, but was in good condition this afternoon. The machines of the Curtiss school were in operation late in the day for the regular instruction work, and as usual two or three passengers were taken on brief flights, but there was no exhibition work. Carlstrom himself did not fly.

Marriage and death notices intended for insertion in The New York Times may be telephoned to 1000 Bryant.

WARFIELD REVIVES 'THE MUSIC MASTER'

After Nine Years He Resumes His Most Successful and Most Lovable Role.

ITS APPEAL UNDIMINISHED

THE MUSIC MASTER. Charles Klein's drama revived, with David Warfield in his original role. At the Knickerbocker.

Herr Anton von Barwig	David Warfield
Signor Tagliafico	Auguste Aramini
M. Louis Pinac	Francis Gaillard
Herr August Poons	Edward Moller
Henry A. Stanton	Charles Abbott
Andrew Cruger	William Boag
Beverly Cruger	Griffith Lusk
Mr. Schwarz	William H. Barwald
Mr. Ryan	Tony Bevan
Al. Costello	Louis Hendricks
Joles	Pickering Brown
Ditson	H. G. Carlton
Danny	Willie Battista
A Collector	Thomas Gilbert
Mrs. Andrew Cruger	Eleanor Barry
Helen Stanton	Jane Cooper
Miss Houston	Marie Bates
Jenny	Helen Weer
Charlotte	Rose Saltonstall
Octavie	Gertrude Valentine

After nine years of various adventures and misadventures David Warfield resumed last evening his most lovable and most successful rôle. "The Music Master" was revived at the Knickerbocker and thus there was added one more to the severely limited list of things that are worth going to see. It is announced, and presumably in good faith, that the engagement is to last only eight weeks. That scarcely leaves enough time for all those who would hugely enjoy another meeting with Herr von Barwig of Leipsic and Houston Street.

For in the twelve years since Klein's play was first presented to New York, at what is now called the Republic, it has lost none of its strong and honorable appeal. For all the changing modes and for all the trifling changes that have been made in the text since the play was put away on the shelf, it is now as it was then, a simple, scanty, theatrically sentimental comedy, made much of by the cunning of David Belasco and made beautiful by one of the finest examples of the actor's art in the contemporary American theatre.

That performance, which is the happiest possible illustration of Mr. Warfield's supreme command over his somewhat limited artistic means, has lost none of its beauty. Here again is the memorable interplay of humor and pathos, here again the brave, determined smile that almost breaks your heart. And here, above all, is a certain impalpable spiritual radiance which is always present when acting is in its best estate.

When the late Charles Klein's estate was appraised by some experts of the theatre, the value of "The Music Master" was set down as zero because, without Warfield, it would be valueless—as valueless, say, as "Rip Van Winkle," with Jefferson no longer here to play it—and at the time that appraisal was made the present revival had not been announced. But with Warfield "The Music Master" provides a heart-warming and unusually satisfying evening in the theatre. He could, if he chose, play it all the rest of his days.

In this revival a half dozen rôles are in the original hands. The changes, most of which were necessary, are for the most part unimportant. It does seem as if the spaghetti were not eaten now with quite the virtuosity that Ricciardi brought to that unenviable task and our memories of the original Jenny are of a less wooden performance. It seems as though the villain, too, must have been better played. Edward Moller is the best of the newcomers. Minnie Dupree, of course, is no longer the long lost daughter and it is needless to say that neither of the slinking and gigglesome débutantes is now played by Jane Cowl. But after all, it was only important that of that original cast David Warfield and Marie Bates should reappear. And here are David Warfield and Marie Bates. There is no need to report how thunderous was the welcome accorded last night when the befurbelowed and sentimental old landlady trotted onto the stage.

It was second only to the cordiality of the greeting that welcomed Mr. Warfield. After his own acknowledgment he extracted Mr. Belasco himself from his accessible hiding place in the wings. When "The Music Master" was new Mr. Belasco was in the midst of his war with the syndicate, and his speech then was full of gunpowder. Last evening his speech was just a few words in memory of the author of the play, who went down with the Lusitania.

SYMPHONY'S NEW CONCERTS

A Series for Carnegie Hall in Addition to Those at Aeolian.

For the first time in several years the Symphony Society of New York, Walter Damrosch, conductor, will give a regular series of concerts at Carnegie Hall this year. They will consist of five concerts on Thursday afternoons and five on Saturday evenings, and will begin on Thursday afternoon, Nov. 23, and Saturday evening, Nov. 25. These concerts will be in addition to the usual series by the organization on Friday and Sunday afternoons at Aeolian Hall, and the reason given for the inauguration of the new series is that the Aeolian Hall concerts have been practically fully sold out by subscription already.

Musical circles were interested yesterday in the announcement of the new concerts, and it was said they afforded new proof of the sensational growth among musical audiences in New York that the last few years have brought forth.

Playwright Tully Has a Daughter.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Walton Tully are being congratulated on the birth of a daughter yesterday at the Woman's Hospital. Mrs. Tully, before her marriage, was Miss Gladys C. Hanna of Toronto, Canada. Mr. Tully is the author of "The Flame."

THEATRICAL NOTES.

James W. Gerard, United States Ambassador to Germany, who returned home yesterday for his first visit to America since the war began, saw Ziegfeld's "Midnight Frolic" on the New Amsterdam Roof last night.

Winthrop Ames has been besieged with so many letters from actors requesting that he give a special performance of "Pierrot the Prodigal" that one will probably be announced in the near future.

"Le Poilu," the French operetta presented at the Garrick Monday night, has been shorn of its American embellishments, and Lucien Bonheur, who brought the piece from Paris, asserts the cabaret climax of the second act has been replaced by one more in spirit with the rest of the work.

Raymond Kenny has forsaken Shakespeare for vaudeville. Mr. Kenny was engaged to play the role of Pistol in the revival of "The Merry Wives of Windsor," but instead he is appearing with Emmett Corrigan at the Palace in the melodramatic sketch, "The Van Lowe Diamond."

Alex Kosloff, who staged one of the early Russian ballets at the Winter Garden, has been engaged to appear in the ballet that will be a feature of the revue in preparation for production next month.

Lydia Lopokova was the guest of honor of the Washington Square Players at a supper given after last night's performance. The danseuse skipped rehearsal with the Ballet Russe to see the new bill of her former associates.

The final showing of the film "Civilization" at the Park will take place Sunday night, Oct. 22.

A private showing of "A Daughter of the Gods" was given yesterday at the Lyric to the accompaniment of Robert Hood Bowers's score, played by an augmented orchestra.

The Hippodrome ushers, headed by the bugle and drum corps and the uniformed force of the playhouse, will march to the Brooklyn Navy Yard this morning to be the guests of Father Duff, Chaplain of the U. S. S. Nevada.

Wm. Fox Is Free to Exhibit His Film, "The War Bride's Secret."

Justice Pendleton yesterday denied the petition of Herbert Brenon for an injunction to restrain William Fox from exhibiting a film entitled "The War Bride's Secret." From a perusal of the affidavits Justice Pendleton said he was not satisfied there had been any attempt to deceive or mislead, the plaintiff having alleged that the picture was an infringement on a film produced by him called "War Brides."

In stating that the Justice had issued a temporary injunction against the exhibition of the film THE TIMES yesterday was in error. The information was furnished THE TIMES by representatives of Mr. Brenon, who yesterday admitted their mistake. The matter first came up before Justice Goff last Friday when he issued a temporary injunction restraining the use of the title. The following day he modified this order, removing the restriction from the territory of Greater New York, leaving the question of the film's exhibition elsewhere to Justice Pendleton. The matter was argued before him Monday.

Ballet Russe Members Marry.

Alexandra Wasilewska and Waslay Kegler, members of the Diaghileff Ballet Russe, were married yesterday at the Church of St. Stanislaw by the Rev. Dr. Strelecki. Their acquaintance began eight years ago, when they were members of the ballet at the Warsaw Theatre. Both will appear here in the engagement of the company which begins next week at the Manhattan Opera House.

REGISTER TODAY.

Today is the third day of registration. To vote at the coming election and to enroll so as to be able to vote in next year's direct primaries you must first register. The polls are open from 5:30 this afternoon until 10:30 this evening. Register today.

Notice to Advertisers

Yesterday — Tuesday, Oct. 10th—The New York Times for want of space was unable to insert over 7,000 lines (24 columns) of advertising.

This great demand for advertising space in The New York Times, it is anticipated, will continue for some time and makes it necessary to use discrimination in assigning space, i. e., preference will be given to advertisements having news value and to those for which copy and illustrations are delivered before 6 P. M. on the day before publication.

Reasons FOR UNDER SENTENCE NOW PLAYING AT THE HARRIS THEATRE WEST 42D STREET

WHY ROI COOPER MEGRUE and IRVIN COBB WROTE THIS PLAY:
BECAUSE they had a big idea.
BECAUSE they want to show prison conditions against which Warden Osborne fought at Sing Sing.
WHY WE PRODUCED THIS PLAY:
BECAUSE we agreed with Megrue and Cobb.
BECAUSE we assembled a splendid cast headed by George Nash and Janet Beecher.
BECAUSE we believe this play to be as powerful as "Within the Law."
BECAUSE it is as powerful as "Within the Law."
BECAUSE it is a play about human beings and inhuman conditions.
WHY THE PUBLIC IS GOING TO SEE THIS PLAY:
BECAUSE it has laughs.
BECAUSE it has tears.
BECAUSE it has thrills.
BECAUSE it has ideas.
BECAUSE it shows the battle between a woman's love and Wall Street's greed.
AND ALSO BECAUSE:

"Another 'Lion and the Mouse.'"—Louis Sherwin, Globe. "A real play at last about a vital subject—should run all season."—Stephen Rathbun, Eve. Sun. "Intensely interesting—Sure to entertain."—Eve. Telegram. "Drama in the most interesting sense of the word, Really big and true in its human appeal."—Charles Darnton in the Evening World.

THE REIGN OF THE

Mason & Hamlin

PIANO

AMERICA has, for many years, led the world in the quality of pianos produced. One dominating name has succeeded another as something more beautiful, more enduring, has been evolved, the leadership always passing to the piano which is finer and more costly than those which have preceded it. To-day the Mason & Hamlin is universally acknowledged to be the most exquisitely beautiful piano the world has ever known—the choice of the connoisseur, and of those that buy the best that the world affords. Inspection is invited.

SEABURY'S 'GALLERY' HAS HOTCHKISS NOW

Candidate Says He Helped Whitman to Mutilate the Compensation Law.

ITS INTENT DESTROYED

Tells Brooklyn Audience Governor and Republican Legislature Proved Hostile to Labor.

Samuel Seabury, Democratic candidate for Governor, speaking last night at the Brooklyn Academy of Music, attacked the administration of Governor Whitman as hostile to labor, declaring that Governor Whitman had "mutilated" the workmen's compensation law, so as to take away many of its benefits.

He added to his "political rogues' gallery" William H. Hotchkiss, who, he said, as attorney for special interests, had helped to weaken the law.

The amendment to the Constitution to authorize the workmen's compensation law, Mr. Seabury said, authorized the enactment of laws "for the protection of the lives, health, and safety of employes."

"The Republican Legislature," he said, "limited the purpose which the people intended by the definition of the term 'injury' inserted in the law. The law provides that the words 'injury' and 'personal injury' shall mean only 'accidental injuries.' This provision, quietly injected into the law, excluded the right of workmen to recover for occupational diseases.

"Conspicuous among those who appeared before the Legislature in behalf of the McDonald direct settlement amendment was William H. Hotchkiss. He claims to be a Progressive, but he did not hesitate in behalf of the insurance companies to weaken and mutilate the workmen's compensation law, a measure to which the Progressive Party was specially committed.

"I have already pointed out that the police of a large city find it necessary to establish a rogues' gallery in which to hang the pictures of those accustomed to prey upon society. In addition to the two portraits in my gallery which I have already displayed allow me to unveil the portrait of one who has endeavored by a life-sapping amendment to take away from the workingmen of this State the benefits of the workmen's compensation law. I refer to William H. Hotchkiss."

Secretary of War Baker spoke for the Administration. He got the greatest applause when he praised the President for keeping the nation out of war. Secretary of Commerce Redfield defended the President's course on the eight hour bill.

Mr. Seabury planned to leave at 2 o'clock for Waverly, where he will speak his noon. From there he will go to Watkins and Montour Falls by automobile, and in the evening to Elmira. Tomorrow Mr. Seabury will speak at Ithaca and several other places, going to Auburn for a night meeting. He will speak at Rome at noon on Friday, and at Newburg and Beacon in the evening. On Saturday he will make an automobile tour of Westchester County.

McCOMBS LOSES VOICE.

Suddenly Stricken with Tonsilitis While Going to Meet Wilson.

While on his way yesterday to Shadow Lawn in company with Vance C. McCormick, Chairman of the Democratic National Committee, to keep a luncheon engagement with President Wilson, William F. McCombs, Democratic candidate for United States Senator for New York, became suddenly ill of acute tonsilitis. He wired the President that he was forced to break the engagement, and then went to the Hotel Lorraine, where he was treated by his physician, Dr. George Mehler.

Mr. McCombs canceled his engagement to speak at the Academy of Music in Brooklyn, where he was to have appeared last night with Samuel Seabury, the Democratic gubernatorial candidate, and it was said that he would be unable to make any speeches until the end of the week at the earliest. It was said that Mr. McCombs overdid himself in Albany, where he made four speeches.

SOUTHERN RY.'S BIG GAIN.

Stockholders of the Southern Railway, meeting yesterday in Richmond, Va., adopted resolutions approving the policy of the Directors in withholding dividends for the present. It was announced that damage to the railroad property occasioned by the July storms was approximately $1,250,000, without taking into account loss of traffic or the cost of detouring trains. Retiring Directors were re-elected.

The annual report showed a surplus earned equivalent to 5.2 per cent. on the $120,000,000 of common stock, after allowing 5 per cent. for the preferred. This compares with 2.6 per cent. earned last year. Total operating revenues were $69,997,000, as against $62,199,000 in the previous year. Total income was $24,426,000, against $16,638,000 in 1915. The net income was $9,245,000, comparing with $1,523,000 last year and $4,747,000 in 1914. President Harrison says in the report:

> The industrial characteristics of the year in the South have been revival and expansion. The march of progress, which was interrupted at the outbreak of the European war by the depression in the price of cotton, the South's chief staple, has been resumed.
> A notable feature of Southern manufacturing development is the rate at which the consumption of cotton, one of the principal raw materials of the South, has increased in Southern mills. United States census figures show that in the twelve months ended July 31, 1916, the mills of the South consumed 3,526,787 bales, as compared with 3,026,969 bales last year, an increase of 499,818 bales, or 16.51 per cent. The mills of all other States consumed 2,869,185 bales in the twelve months this year, as compared with 2,570,393 bales last year, an increase of 298,792 bales, or 11.62 per cent.

Prospects are favorable for a healthy growth in all lines in 1917.

ROOSEVELT IS GOING AFTER LABOR VOTES

Will Play His Union Card for Trump Among Miners at Wilkes-Barre.

Colonel Theodore Roosevelt will divest himself of his military title when he speaks at Wilkes-Barre, Penn., on Saturday night. When he confronts his expected big audience of coal miners and other industrial workers, it will be not as "Colonel," but as "Comrade" Roosevelt, and, according to announcement, he will speak to them "as one union man to other union men."

Mr. Roosevelt is the proud possessor of a union card and he holds honorary membership in several labor organizations, among them the United Mine Workers of America and the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers.

Concern among the Republican leaders, responsible for the conduct of the campaign, not over the outlook in Pennsylvania—for they think Keystone State is as safely Republican as any State could possibly be—but over the apparent coldness of labor men all over the country toward the Republican nominee for President and their apparent friendliness toward President Wilson, is responsible for this projected Roosevelt relief expedition. As was the case earlier in the fight when the cry arose for "more punch in the campaign," so Colonel Roosevelt has been called in now to meet a pressing emergency.

Colonel Roosevelt has always been popular in Pennsylvania. He carried the State in the Presidential contest four years ago. On his memorable trip through this region shortly after his return from Africa the people hailed him enthusiastically. Roosevelt campaign of the 1904 vintage are treasured possessions and still adorn the walls in miners' homes throughout this district.

Several speaking dates arranged for ex-President Taft were announced yesterday. He will speak in Waterbury, Conn., tomorrow, and in New Haven on Oct. 20. On Oct. 19, he will speak in Baltimore. He will campaign in Indiana on Oct. 25, and the following day will address a mass meeting in St. Louis. Oct. 27, 28 and 30 will find him on the stump in Iowa, South Dakota and Michigan. On Oct. 31 he is scheduled to speak in Philadelphia, and on Nov. 1, in Columbus, Ohio. He will end his tour with speeches in Yonkers and this city on Nov. 2.

Governor Whitman will deliver the first of his speeches in the Middle West today, when he addresses a noon meeting under the auspices of the Hamilton Club, in Chicago. He speaks tonight in Rock Island, Ill., and addresses another noon meeting in Chicago tomorrow, under the auspices of the State League of Republican Clubs. At night he speaks in South Bend, Ind. On Friday he speaks in Detroit, Mich.

ARGUE READING COAL CASE.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—The first of the great Coal Trust cases was taken up today for argument when the Reading case was called in the United States Supreme Court. The purpose of the suit is to dissolve a combination involving over $500,000,000 of capital and prevent railroads from operating coal mines in an alleged monopoly. The Government was represented by Assistant Attorney General Todd and Solicitor General Davis.

The case heard today comes to the Supreme Court on an appeal from the decree of the United States District Court of Eastern Pennsylvania, dismissing the suit of the Government and holding that the Reading Company is not a monopoly. The court, however, ordered the Central Railroad of New Jersey to divorce its control of the Wilkes-Barre and Lehigh Coal Company. The Government insists that the entire monopoly be dissolved.

Mr. Todd presented the long list of alleged facts to sustain the Government's contention that the Reading was a monopoly and was violating the Commodity Clause. While Mr. Todd was explaining the formation of the Reading Company in 1896, following the receivership of the Reading Railroad and the Reading Coal and Iron Company, Associate Justice Brandeis asked whether the coal company paid any dividends. Mr. Todd explained that it did not, and that it was carried on the books of the Reading Company with a deficit of $100,000,000, although it had a capitalization of $8,000,000.

Mr. Todd, in picturing the monopoly that the Reading Company had created, said: "If in time this monopoly is not dissolved the Reading Company will soon control every foot of coal in existence. This company now controls 63 per cent. of the known coal supply, and with its assets of $500,000,000, all held together by a holding company, not engaged in transportation, mining, or selling, forms one of the worst combinations. It is the Standard Oil and Northern Securities rolled into one."

Associate Justice Holmes here asked: "May it not be better in such a case, where the known supply will be exhausted in time, to have such a corporation to properly conserve the supply than have it diminished by many operators?"

Mr. Todd replied that that was a purely economic question and not one of law.

He said the same officers and Directors directed the affairs of all the companies and the coal lands were pledged for the debts of the railroad company, citing this as further evidence of a monopoly.

The argument for the Reading was opened by Jackson E. Reynolds. His presentation lasted two hours and was practically a denial of every point raised by the Government. He showed that the Reading does not control the output in the Schuylkill region, declaring that there are thirty-five collieries owned by the Reading and fifty-three by individuals, and that the Reading mined 9,000,000 tons of coal in 1913, while the output of individuals was between 19,000,000 and 20,000,000.

Before and After

THE man who employs a lawyer to prepare his will, and appoints an individual Trustee, overlooks that trusteeships are just as much of a business as wills, and that expert financial counsel in handling an estate is just as vital to the beneficiaries as expert legal counsel in disposing of it.

The Astor Trust Company is chartered by the State to act as Executor and Trustee of your estate, and its authoritative knowledge costs precisely the same as the limited human judgment of an individual.

Hair Nets and Bar Iron Among the Things Classified.

William H. Stiner & Son, J. Giguet, and F. Ludewig & Co. claimed before the Board of General Appraisers yesterday that Collector Malone erred in returning silk hair nets at 70 per cent. as having been made on the Gothrough or Lever machines. The issue, which arose under the Tariff act of 1909, was finally submitted under a stipulation entered into between the Assistant Attorney General and attorneys for the importers, it being agreed that certain of the goods had been made on the machines referred to, while others of the hair nets were manufactured on different machines. The Collector was affirmed as to the nets made on the Gothrough or Lever machines, and reversed as to the balance of the goods, Judge Howell directing that entry be given the latter at 60 per cent.

The board decided, in the protest case of the Robert Reiner Importing Company, that following a recent test case so-called paper punching machines were not to be regarded for tariff purposes as "embroidery" machines. The claim for entry at 20 per cent. as manufactures of metal not specially provided for was sustained, the Collector being reversed in taking 25 per cent.

Gustaf Lundberg, Boston, was sustained in a contention dealing with the classification of round bar iron imported in ten-foot lengths. The Collector levied duty at 10 per cent. under the provision for "wire rods," while the importer insisted that duty at the rate of 5 per cent. as "bar iron" accrued. Judge Fischer held the lower rate was applicable to the merchandise.

C. D. Stone & Co., Chicago, lost in a protest covering merchandise set down on the invoice as manifold paper. The claim was that duty should have been taken at 25 per cent. under the provision for "typewriter, onionskin, and imitation onionskin papers." The board concluded that the Collector made the right classification by levying 35 per cent. as "imitation parchment papers."

The classification division of the board cleared the files of a batch of protests either undefended at the hearings or submitted without proof. The protests under these heads overruled were filed by the following importers: Lamont, Corliss & Co., the Surpass Leather Company, B. Shackman & Co., Butler Brothers, F. W. Myers & Co., W. H. Stiner & Son, Landahl-Brandee & Co., H. Lichtenberg, the H. A. Robinson Company, Takata & Co., F. B. Vandegrift & Co., J. Wasserman & Co., and Henry Otte.

DUTY ON PHOTOGRAVURES.

Method of Arriving at Their Values Shown in a Decision.

Importers here who bought photogravures in England met with difficulties when their invoices reached the New York Custom House. This was revealed in a reappraisement decision made by Judges Sullivan and Brown, constituting Board 1, of the Board of General Appraisers. The photogravures were shipped to New York by Oppenheimer, Seckel & Co., of London.

It appears from the testimony at hearings before the board that the Rembrandt Intaglio Printing Company of London, from whom the prints were originally purchased, print from plates furnished by the purchasers, which remain in the custody and control of the printing company. Afterward the purchaser, whoever he may be, has them colored at the best price obtainable.

In the present case the uncolored prints were furnished by the Rembrandt firm at the regular list price. Then Oppenheimer, Seckel & Co., agents or commissionaires of the New York importers, had them colored at a stated price, charging as their compensation 5 per cent. of the price paid for the print and 5 per cent. of the price paid for the coloring. When the goods went to the Appraiser's Stores for the usual customs examination, the officials added to the invoice 10 per cent. for general expenses, and 8 per cent. profit under Paragraph L of the present tariff law.

At the hearing before a single General Appraiser that official allowed 8 per cent. for profit, and refused to sustain the Government for 10 per cent. for general expenses. An appeal was then taken by the Government to the full General Appraisers. The present decision says in part:

"We have not before us a single item of the cost of materials, or the cost of fabrication. 'Cost of material' would naturally mean the cost of a plate, cost of labor, the cost of material used in the production of the unfinished plate. We are therefore justified in concluding that the price charged for uncolored prints includes their cost up to that moment, which would mean material, fabrication, and general expenses. Is not the same true with reference to the coloring? No effort was made to show the cost of material, fabrication, and coloring. A lump sum was paid for the performance of that duty, and that certainly included all costs of fabrication, material, and expenses. It is not entirely clear whether the 5 per cent. profit to Oppenheimer, Seckel & Co. was part of the market value. The importer practically admits that it is. We accept that conclusion and sustain the invoice plus 5 per cent."

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Fairly Quiet Session Follows Monday's Turmoil, with Gains General.

The excitement that featured Monday's stock market had nearly all disappeared before the opening of the Exchange yesterday, and a very orderly opening prepared the way for a moderate recovery that held its own throughout the session. Transactions amounted to 1,137,000 shares, but they were so evenly distributed that the market appeared commonplace after the stirring times witnessed on the previous day. The list weakened somewhat in the late afternoon, but not enough to wipe out the gains, and nearly every issue profited by the day's dealings.

It was said that the public buying yesterday was very good, and this appeared somewhat surprising in view of the advice sent out to customers by most of the houses. Brokers felt that the submarine situation was fraught with many dangers, and until the U-53 is accounted for they were telling customers that it seemed wise to stay out of the market. The reaction attracted buying on the part of many traders who had sold out their stocks in the expectation of seeing lower prices, and the demand for stocks was so substantial that a very considerable part of the decline registered on Monday was extinguished. The advance was contrary to the sentiment on the floor, most of the professional traders holding to the belief that a secondary slump was to be expected, and it was said that the recovery was halted by the building up of a new short interest.

However that may be, the fact remains that the public picked up stocks again as though serenely confident that no serious consequences need be feared from the re-entrance of the submarine question into this country's international relations. Beet Sugar got back to 99, closing at 98½ with a net advance of 2⅞; American Sugar gained 3¾, and Cuba Cane, 1⅝. United States Steel fluctuated from 113 to 111¾, closing an eighth above the bottom with a net gain of ⅜, while Republic Steel recovered another 1⅛, making 14 points added to the low price of the previous session. The smaller railroad issues came in for buying that sent their prices up sharply, Southern Railway common being particularly active on the publication of a good annual report. The Southern Railway 4 per cent. bonds gained nearly 5 points. The copper stocks were also in better favor yesterday.

About the only stock to move against the current yesterday was Tennessee Copper, which had previously established a reputation for acting after laws of its own. This issue dropped to 21⅝ from 25⅝, when reports got into circulation of the formation of an underwriting syndicate to stand back of the proposed reorganization. There was little activity in foreign exchange rates, and the flurry in call money seemed to have passed with the submarine excitement. Loans yesterday were mostly made at 3 per cent.

PRICE OF CRUDE OIL GOES UP

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 10.—Continuing their efforts to bring to the refineries the vast quantities of crude oil now in the hands of producers, the principal purchasing agencies today, at the opening of the market, announced an increase of 10 cents a barrel for the higher priced grades, and 5 cents for heavy oil. The new prices are as follows:

Pennsylvania crude, $2.50; Cabell, $2.02; Mercer black, Corning and Newcastle, $2; Somerset, $1.85; Ragland, 85 cents.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Second-Hand Steel.

As time passes the demand for steel products appears to expand, practically day by day. The trade hears of high premiums being paid jobbers by consumers for second-hand rails, plates, railroad track material, &c., and such a state of the market has caused a search for salable goods from one coast to the other. A jobber told yesterday of a railroad disposing of a round amount of rails, which had been in use for more than twenty years, at $32 a ton, and the rails when new cost no more than $28 a ton. The purchaser of the used rails immediately turned over the whole tonnage again in export channels at a price close to $35. Active speculation is being carried on in such job lots of steel, the chief difficulty, according to the speculators, being the scarcity of wares most in demand.

Copper Cargoes Lost.

The activity of U-boat 53 and the hazards of ocean traffic have removed 4,600,000 pounds of copper from the world's supply since last Saturday night. The steamer Strathdene, which was sent to the bottom off Nantucket, carried 3,000,000 pounds, and the balance went down on the Milazzo, which burned while en route to Italy. In normal times a loss of this total would appear insignificant, except to the underwriters, but in these days of urgent need abroad 4,600,000 pounds is a lot of copper. Practically all the available supplies of this country have been contracted for far into 1917. It will not be an easy matter, therefore, for the buyers to replace this metal at the present time.

Stock Exchange Seats Rise.

Active stock markets, whether prices move up or down, work to enhance the value of Stock Exchange seats. The sale of a seat was arranged yesterday at $74,500, a gain of $4,500 over the last preceding transaction. The highest quotation last year was $74,000, and less than two months ago memberships commanded no more than $65,000 each.

Tennessee Copper Retreats.

Tennessee Copper shares weathered the shock of Monday's market in so strong a fashion as to arouse comment only to drop back rapidly yesterday. It has been a long time since the stock lost as much ground, 2¾ points, and the movement was surprising to many persons in the Street who noted a few days ago that similar influences had only slight reflection in the price. It was reported in a convincing manner last week that 200,000 new shares would soon be issued and Tennessee Copper stood up firmly. Confirmation of the story yesterday set the price back sharply.

Nothing to Worry About.

Wall Street's moods vary so rapidly that an active trader does not feel safe in taking a half hour off for luncheon in these stirring times. The atmosphere here on Monday morning was tense, and talk of a panic was heard, but before the close of the day interest in the exploits of the German submarine, or submarines, was already giving way to curiosity over the progress of the world's series games at Boston, and only the clerks who saw a night's work ahead of them in straightening out the morning's business had cause to remember the anxiety of the first hour. By yesterday noon the Street was almost back to normal, and the ticker received no more attention than it gets in an ordinary day. Shocks have come upon the stock market so frequently in the last two years that they are making less and less of an impression on traders' nerves. It was the consensus of opinion among brokerage office managers that the small trader should take his money and go home, to stay there until the latest war-made complication is cleared up, but the trader thought otherwise, and picked up stocks wherever he thought a rise might be expected. It needs a big shock to make a nine-days' wonder in these topsy-turvy days.

Higher Coal Coming.

No one has any sympathy for the coal man, but he is going to need it this year. The Coal Trade Journal says that the anthracite situation is growing very strenuous. It is said that the production of anthracite this year will hardly equal consumption, and a shortage of cars is making it difficult to get coal into the New York market. The labor supply limits the production of coal, and with high wages in all fields labor is taking matters easily. Within the week there has been a considerable advance in the price of anthracite, and the retailer who is not forearmed with contracts to insure him a regular supply to take care of his customers faces a hard Winter. Some of the independent producers, finding an extra demand upon them, have been putting the price up day by day until premiums amounting to $1 a ton above the supposedly regular schedule have been paid. This is taken to mean that there must be an advance in the retail price, for the margin allowed the retailer is not sufficient to permit him to take up the advance in the wholesale price, even though premium coal is but one-fourth of his tonnage.

HISTORY IN PICTURE.

Bound volume of ten issues of The New York Times Mid-Week Pictorial, containing reproductions in rotogravure of great scenes of the European war and portraits of celebrities, sent on receipt of $1, Times Square, New York.—Advt.

The Safest Investments are bonds so well secured by property or taxes that business depressions and labor difficulties can have but slight effect on their intrinsic value.

Bonds of this character are quoted in our current list of Investment Offerings. Write or call for a copy of this list No. G-190.

A Fine Sense of Safety

Our organization concentrates all its thought and effort upon the investigating of public utility values, and there is a large element of protection for you in the recommendations of such an organization.

Only the public utility bonds and preferred stocks which, in our opinion, may be considered investment issues, find their way into our offering sheets; today, for example, we recommend

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE.

A decidedly more orderly market existed on the Consolidated Stock Exchange than was the case on Monday. For the time, at least, there was less apprehension regarding undersea boat activity. For the greater part of the day there was a gradual hardening of prices, although, near the close, a degree of reaction developed. Some special upward movements, particularly among the railroad issues, attracted attention.

Trading Dull on Paris Bourse.

PARIS, Oct. 10.—Trading was dull on the Bourse today. Three per cent. rentes, 61 francs 60 centimes for cash. Exchange on London, 27 francs 81½ centimes. Five per cent. loan, 90 francs.

LONDON MARKET IS QUIET.

Weakness of American Shares Is Feature of Day's Trading.

LONDON, Oct. 10.—Money was in better demand and discount rates were quiet today.

The stock market was quiet and about the only feature was the weakness in American shares on possible complications arising from the submarine warfare. The declines, however, merely reflected Wall Street, and owing to the absence of speculation, there was no excitement. The rest of the market was dull and uncertain, as dealers are holding off pending statements in Parliament in connection with a vote of credit. Nigerian tin and rubber and diamond shares were good features, and oil stocks were steady. American securities closed easy.

Large Bank Clearings

Are not in themselves conclusive evidence of prosperity. But their value is greatest when speculation is at a minimum. This is now true in Canada.

The Canadian High Commissioner's latest report emphasizes the enhancement in general conditions over last year. Bank clearings have doubled in total.

The Northern Ohio Traction & Light Company
First Lien and Refunding Mortgage Five Per Cent. Gold Bonds

Dated August 1, 1916 — Due August 1, 1956

Interest payable February 1 and August 1 in New York or Cleveland. Redeemable, as a whole or in part, on any interest date at 105 and accrued interest. Coupon Bonds, $1,000 (registerable as to principal only), $500 and $100. Registered Bonds, $1,000 and multiples, interchangeable with Coupon Bonds of $1,000 denomination

APPROVED BY THE PUBLIC UTILITIES COMMISSION OF OHIO

The properties of the Northern Ohio Traction & Light Company comprise all the city lines in Akron, Canton and Massillon, Ohio and a system of interurban lines connecting these cities with Cleveland. The Company does the exclusive commercial electric light and power business in Akron, and supplies electric energy, directly or indirectly, to nine other communities.

These Bonds are secured by a mortgage on all the property owned by the Company subject to the liens of $10,075,000 underlying Bonds. Through the deposit with the Trustee of $2,300,000, par value, of prior issues, the First Lien and Refunding 5's share ratably, to the extent of the Bonds deposited, in underlying liens. Additional Bonds may be issued only under carefully safeguarded restrictions.

The replacement value of the physical property is largely in excess of the total outstanding bonded debt.

The Bonds precede $4,600,000 par value Preferred Stock and $9,000,000 par value Common Stock, paying dividends at the rate of 6% and 5%, respectively.

Under the terms of the mortgage the Company agrees to provide a Maintenance and Depreciation Fund adequate to keep the property in excellent physical condition.

The Union Trust Company of New York has two well-equipped Branches for its uptown business—the 38th Street Branch in the heart of the busy Fifth Avenue shopping district, and the Plaza Branch at Fifth Avenue and 60th Street, just opposite the entrance to Central Park.

The facilities of all the offices of the Company are offered to depositors of either Branch or of the Main Office, at 80 Broadway.

The Union Trust Safe Deposit Company, entirely owned by the Union Trust Company, conducts modern safe deposit vaults at both Branches.

NEW COPPER FINANCING.

Tennessee Company to Increase Capital with New Corporation.

Plans for refinancing the Tennessee Copper Company are expected to be completed within a few days. William B. Joyce, a Director, issued this statement yesterday:

"It is true that negotiations are now going on to have the Tennessee Copper Company refinanced by the organization of a new company. The negotiations are in progress, but no papers have yet been executed."

The new corporation will take over the Tennessee's assets and business. It is understood that this company will have double the present number of shares, amounting all told to 400,000 shares, half of which will be exchanged for Tennessee stock and the remainder offered to stockholders for subscription at $16 a share. Wall Street heard a rumor yesterday that a syndicate was being formed by J. S. Bache & Co. and Adolph Lewisohn & Sons to underwrite the subscription stock at $14 a share.

The stock will assure the corporation of nearly $3,000,000 cash to begin operations. It is said in quarters close to the management that this will suffice to straighten out existing financial difficulties and provide sufficient working capital.

WHAT TO INVEST IN
When the security markets reopened late in 1914 it was not so difficult to select profitable purchases as it is now with prices at high levels.
What to invest in, with profits assured and losses eliminated, is a problem that requires more than one's own judgment to solve correctly at this time. Write for our opinion on the present Investment Situation.

Mr. Mahlon C. Swartz, President of the Company, supplies the following information:

The Clyde Motor Truck Company is located in New York—at Farmingdale, Long Island—where it has spacious new factory buildings of single unit type, one story, sawtooth, brick and steel construction covering 19,500 square feet of space and fronting the main line of the Long Island Railroad. Over 40 acres of land have been provided for expansion and additional construction is under way.

The Company was incorporated March 7, 1916. It is under the management of automobile men who have been active and have had practical experience in the industry for from five to fourteen years with large and successful companies such as the White Motor Company, Studebaker Corporation and General Motors.

Within six months from the time the company's development was begun, land has been purchased, factory buildings erected; its organization brought together, and the engineering department with its laboratory and draughting rooms are within a few days of completing the original construction of what the company intends shall be its sole output—The Clyde one-ton truck.

Clyde Trucks will be Presented to the Domestic Trade about October 15th and will Sell at $1,000 f. o. b. New York

This truck has already been sold in the foreign market to the extent of over $200,000. A single order for 204 trucks ($204,000), which carries with it the Australian agency, is now on the company's books. Announcement of this truck made in the principal cities, in conjunction with the distribution of this stock, has created an instant demand from dealers.

The big successes of the motor world have been made in making motors to meet a price demand. This has been done a dozen times in pleasure cars and today there is a similar opportunity in the motor truck field. It is a one-ton truck to sell at $1,000 and the Clyde Motor Truck Company of New York has taken this field. It has put upon the market the first do-everything, go-everywhere truck to sell at $1,000 flat—it has picked an open field yet untouched.

This truck has been designed to be produced in quantity. The company's first building schedule of 1,000 trucks within the first twelve months is unquestionably the largest first-year schedule of any new organization that has ever been developed in the East, and will make this Clyde Motor Truck Company the largest exclusive builders of one-ton trucks in the world.

The company's engineering department is under the direction of Mr. A. F. Mais, formerly of the Daimler Motor Company of London, England, and the Studebaker Corporation in Detroit, Mich., and recognized now in this country as one of the foremost authorities on motor truck construction; and Mr. C. R. Van Buskirk, who assisted in designing the famous Mercedes automobile. The sales department is under the direction of Mr. W. F. Melhuish, Vice-President and General Manager, who has been in touch with buyers of American trucks for the past fourteen years and knows exactly what the public demands in a thoroughly first-class one-ton motor truck.

These men have not entered the business simply because others have made money in it. The manufacture of trucks has been their training and they have designed the Clyde $1,000 truck because they see an unequalled opportunity.

Motor truck building is just beginning—it is now where pleasure-car building was several years ago. It is about the only business in the world where the demand exceeds the supply.

MoToR says in its issue of Feb., 1916:

> "There are few industries in America today which compare with the motor trade in the financial returns to their investors. The Ford company alone divided $48,000,000 in stock dividends, after rebating more than $15,000,000 to its customers. The Haynes company declared a 100 per cent dividend, after doubling its capital stock. The Chandler interests recently divided 77½ per cent, making a total of 100 per cent for the year. The Canadian Ford organization declared a 600 per cent return. General Motors divided 50 per cent with its stockholders. The Continental Motor Co. cut a 100 per cent melon, while the Hayes Wheel Co. handed out 166 per cent. The Republic and Firestone tire organizations distributed 100 and 16 per cent dividends, respectively. This list might be almost endlessly expanded if space permitted."

A limited allotment of Preferred 8% stock is being offered for public subscription. We call your attention to the small capitalization of this company, which makes this stock particularly attractive to the investor.

The legality of the incorporation of this company has been passed upon by H. Randolph Guggenheimer and John J. Curtin, Attorneys, Equitable Bldg., N. Y.

The Price Is $10.00 for {One share preferred stock (par value $10) / One share common stock (par value $10)}

The price of the stock will positively be advanced on October 15

HEAVY BUYING SENDS COTTON UP 37 POINTS

CONTRACTS VERY SCARCE

South Reports a Big Demand, with Farmers Holding Because of Belief in Short Crop.

There was a fresh outburst of buying in the cotton market yesterday, and the effect of the liquidation which occurred on the opening Monday morning was strikingly apparent. Contracts were very scarce, especially for the December position. The opening was strong at an advance of 5 to 15 points, largely influenced by the strength at Liverpool, where prices were 15½ to 19 English points above the previous day's closing. Private cables stated that there was no hedge selling and very little offering. Egyption cotton was also very strong.

One private cable said: "Even if your market declines, we doubt if ours will follow, probably in consequence of small shipments. Market feverish pending news from America."

Southern advices reported a big demand, with farmers holding very firmly on account of their belief in a short crop. In spite of these claims of holding by the South, however, marketing is on a very liberal scale, and it is believed that the movement of the crop into sight for the week will be in excess of 600,000 bales.

The weather continues favorable for picking, although scattered showers were reported throughout the central and eastern belts yesterday, with scattered light rains in Texas.

Market closed very steady.

WHEAT.

The submarine situation was less of a feature in the wheat market yesterday and the trade felt relieved that no further developments had occurred, and also was reassured by the fact that vessels continued to load grain preparatory to sailing as usual. The Argentine news was bullish and throughout the day a firm undertone prevailed, and at the close the market was ⅝@2⅜c net higher. The export demand was slow and sales amounted to only about 300,000 bushels. In the local cash market No. 1 durum was quoted at $1.92¼; No. 2 hard, $1.76¼; No. 1 Northern Duluth, $1.88¼; No. 1 Northern Manitoba, $1.84¼, all free on board, New York.

CORN.

There was some irregularity at the opening of the corn market but prices soon recovered, and in the early afternoon sold ⅝@1c over the previous night in sympathy with the strong advance in wheat. Realizing near the close caused a slight setback, but final prices were still ⅜@⅝c over the previous night. No. 2 yellow corn here was quoted at 99c, cost, insurance, and freight, New York.

OATS.

Early buying carried oats prices ⅝c above the previous night, and after some realizing in the last hour closing prices were ⅜c net higher. Commission houses were buyers on the strength in other grains and on the firmness of the cash market. Locally, the latter closed as follows: Standard, 53¾ to 54½c; No. 3 white, 53¼ to 53¾c; No. 4 white, 52¾ to 53¼c; fancy clipped white, 55½ to 58c; ordinary clipped white, 54 to 55c, all elevator.

PROVISIONS.

The provision market was firm, although price movements were confined within a comparatively narrow range. Hog receipts were quite liberal and hog prices at the start were easier, but commission houses were good buyers and offers were readily taken. Receipts of hogs at Chicago were 20,000; estimated for Wednesday, 31,000; Kansas City received 14,000 and Omaha 2,800.

COTTONSEED OIL.

Prices in the cottonseed oil market continued to soar during yesterday's operations, and new high records for the season were again established. There were occasional waves of profit taking, which brought about a reaction, but the demand was very active, and closing quotations showed net gains of 30 to 40 points. Total sales for the day were 50,800 barrels. Range of prices:

COFFEE.

The coffee market lost the greater part of Monday's advances during yesterday's trading. Selling was neither active nor aggressive, but there were comparatively few buyers in evidence, and active months worked about 8 to 10 points net lower during the afternoon, with the close showing a net loss of 4 to 8 points. Sales were reported of only 21,350 bags, barely a quarter of Monday's business. The local spot market remained steady, with quotations on the basis of 9⅝c for Rio 7s and 11⅝c for Santos 4s. SUGAR.

Trading in sugar futures held firm throughout the day, due to the advancing raw and refined sugar markets, and trade buying caused prices to hold well above the opening level, the close showing net gains ranging from 7 to 11 points, with total sales 13,750 tons. The late positions were more or less neglected, trading being confined to October to March. Range of prices:

The local market for refined sugar was firm, and one refiner advanced list prices 25 points to the basis of 7.25c for fine granulated, while others remained unchanged at 7c.

Local refiners were active buyers of Cuban raw sugar, and sales for the last two days were estimated at 200,000 bags, prompt and various shipment, at 5c cost and freight basis. The market advanced late in the day on a sale of 5,000 bags, prompt clearance, to the Federal, at 5 1-16c cost and freight, equal to 6.08c for duty paid centrifugals. The market closed strong, with sugar from store at 5¼c and shipment at 5⅛s, cost and freight. Quotations: Centrifugal, 6.08c; molasses, 5.18c, and cost and freight, 5 1-6c.

BUTTER AND EGG MARKET.

BUTTER.—Receipts yesterday, 20,600 packages, including 2,085 packages in transit for export. The tone of the market is easy, and most grades of creamery are held at unchanged prices. It is a waiting market, and unless buyers come in shortly, there will be some further shading of values. Renovated barely steady. Ladles and packing stock a shade easier. Creamery, higher scoring than extras, per lb., 35½@36c; extras, 92 score, 35c; firsts, 88 to 91 score, 34@34½c; seconds, 83 to 87 score, 32½@33½c; thirds, 31½@32c; creamery, unsalted, higher than extras, 36½@37c; extras, 35½@36c; firsts, 34½@35c; seconds, 33@34c; creamery, held, higher than extras, 35¼@35½c; extras, 34¾@35c; firsts, 33½@34½c; seconds, 32½@33c; State dairy, tubs, finest, 34½c; good to prime, 32½@34c; common to fair, 29@32c; renovated, extras, 32c; firsts, 30¼@31½c; lower grades, 29@30c; imitation creamery, firsts, 30½@31c; ladles, June make, firsts, 30@30½c; current make, firsts, 29½@30c; seconds, 29c; lower grades, 27½@28½c; packing stock, current make, No. 1, 28½@29c; No. 2, 28c; lower grades, 26@27½c.

EGGS.—Receipts yesterday, 18,868 cases. There is still a considerable accumulation of medium and poorer grades of fresh eggs on the market and most of the business lately reported is ranging from 31@34c. Strictly fancy fresh are not plenty and are held firmly with sales reported within the higher ranges of quotations. There is a firm holding of fancy refrigerators and a fair distributing movement of these, but not much round lot business. Nearby eggs of fancy quality are very scarce, but comparatively few show quality to reach or approach top quotations. Fresh gathered, extra fine, per dozen, 39@40c; extra firsts, 37@38c; firsts, 33@36c; seconds, 31@33c; thirds and poorer, 28@30c; dirties, No. 1, 28½@29c; No. 2 and poorer, 26@28c; checks, good to choice, dry, 27c; undergrades, 24@26c; refrigerator, special marks, fancy, storage and insurance paid, 32½c; firsts, 31@32c; seconds, 29½@30½c; lower grades, 25@29c; refrigerator, State whites, 33@35c. State, Pennsylvania and nearby hennrey whites, fine to fancy, 55@58c; ordinary to good, 40@54c; gathered whites, ordinary to fine, 38@54c; Western and Southern, gathered whites, 35@42c; State, Pennsylvania and nearby hennery browns, 43@45c; gathered brown and mixed colors, 34@40c.

THE ARMY ASKS AID OF ELECTRIC ROADS

A JOINT BOARD SUGGESTED

Proposal Is That Connecting Lines Plan to Act as One System in Case of Need.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Oct. 10.—Government proposals for the use of the electrical railways and reservations of trackage, equipment and cars for national defense were submitted to the American Electric Railway Association today.

Lieut. Col. Chauncey Baker of the Quartermaster Corps, representing Major Gen. Leonard Wood, U. S. A., commanding the Department of the East, brought the message urging co-ordination of the railroad heads in the present preparedness movement.

Lieut. Col. Baker called for the formulation by the railroads of the country of plans to co-operate and act as one great system in the event of military necessity.

"Railroads are important and powerful factors in preparedness," said Colonel Baker.

The officer said that he believed the War Department would bear a portion of any expense incurred in formulating the plan suggested.

"Proper military authorities should designate central points, and then consult railroad committees relative to the possible service to and from the stations in event of need," said Colonel Baker. "A thorough understanding is absolutely essential between the various great lines in order to avoid confusion.

"I would suggest committees fully empowered to supervise these military districts, they to hold the periodical conferences with both the War and Navy Departments. The transition from peace to war is so sudden that there is no time for preparation after war becomes imminent, and concerted action becomes the imperative need of the hour."

President Charles L. Henry, in his annual address today, recommended that the association place itself on record as favoring an impartial utility board for the settlement of labor differences. He stated that the public would sooner or later demand some such action.

BOOK LESS STEEL TONNAGE.

Corporation Reports Reduction of 137,773 Tons in September.

The United States Steel Corporation yesterday reported a decrease of 137,773 tons during September in the amount of unfilled orders on hand. At the end of the month the total of forward business on the books aggregated 9,522,584 tons.

The falling off was not expected in steel circles, although it was thought that the increase that was looked for would be small. The corporation, like other steel companies, has been refusing many thousands of tons of business weekly, and it is not considered desirable to line up contracts much in excess of 9,500,000 tons with the mills working at capacity. A year ago bookings amounted to 5,317,618 tons, and on June 30 they totaled 9,640,458 tons.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

A. A. Housman & Co. have issued a circular treating of the general status and investment qualities of industrial preferred stocks, including their past records, when subjected to tariff revisions and business depression. A list of preferred stocks which have paid dividends for a long period is appended.

The proposed increase in the capital stock of Armour & Co. from $20,000,000 to $100,000,000 affects about fifteen stockhoders, mostly members of the Armour family, and a few other officers. The $100,000,000 surplus has been accumulated since 1900 when the company received its present capitalization. Last year's operation was relatively as profitable as that of the Swift Company and a dividend of 10 per cent. was paid, but the official statement of the increase in capitalization does not state what this year's dividend is to be. In 1915 the company earned 55 per cent. and this year's gross exceeds $500,000,000.

E. P. Mathewson, for a number of years manager of the Washoe Smelter of Anaconda Company, has resigned to become general manager of the British-American Nickel Corporation of Canada.

The Board of Directors of Bank of New York, N. B. A., yesterday elected James Brown Mabon and Ogden L. Mills to the board. Mr. Mabon succeeds James Brown of Brown Brothers and Mr. Mills succeeds his father, Ogden Mills.

Earnings of Burns Brothers for the months of June, July, and August amounted to $118,000, which compares with $40,000 for the corresponding period of a year ago.

The National City Company is offering at 94 and interest, to yield 5.36 per cent., $4,000,000 Northern Ohio Traction & Light Company first lien and refunding mortgage 5 per cent. bonds. The issue is secured by a mortgage on all the property owned by the company subject to the liens of $10,075,000 underlying bonds.

Foreign Bid Restrictions Removed.

A cablegram received by the Department of Commerce from the American Consulate at Madrid, Spain, says that a royal decree has been issued removing the restrictions on foreign bids for Government purchases of these things: Gas motors over 30 horse power, gas generators for motors over 50 horse power, electric dynamos over 50 kilowatts, 10,000-volt transformers over 200 kilowatts, soft steel for iron forms, rails over 20 kilos per lineal meter, and soft sheet steel.

French Embargo Is Modified.

According to information received from the American Consul General at Paris, a French order of Oct. 5 permits the exportation to Great Britain, British dominions, protectorates and colonies, uninvaded Belgium, Japan, Russia and countries of North and South America of the articles placed under embargo by a decree of the same date. These articles include silk in cocoons or raw or thrown, and dyed or thrown and dyed silk, floss silk and byssus, floss and coarse silk thread, sewing, embroidery, passementerie, cords and other silk thread, artificial silk thread stock, silk or floss fabrics, pure or mixed, and all artificial silk fabrics.

Needle Shortage Severe.

The shortage of needles becomes a more difficult problem with knit goods manufacturers as time goes on. That the matter has passed beyond the stage where it was used to get higher prices is evident from the number of offers that are in the market for the required needles. Fabulous prices are being paid for small lots that can be picked up. One instance is related where an offer of $215 a thousand went begging. The domestic manufacturers are understood to be making some headway, but they seem to be concentrating on certain designs and grades. This makes it hard for the knit goods concern that must get something different.

Duck List Up 20 Per Cent.

List prices on sail, wide and army duck were moved up 20 per cent. yesterday at a meeting of selling agents and manufacturers of these goods that was held in the Merchants' Club, 346 Broadway. The rise was said to be due to the fact that the recent sharp upward movement in cotton placed certain duck constructions in a position where no discounts could be offered on them without a sacrifice of profit by the producers. This condition naturally gave the jobbers litle leeway for seling, and one of the objects of the meeting was to correct it. The regular list prices, which are uniform throughout the trade, carry discounts ranging from 20 to 50 per cent., according to the price of cotton.

Woolen Prices Will Astound.

Woolen selling agents are quite convinced that when quotations are named for the next heavyweight season buyers will be more than astonished. The full effect, they say, of the higher cost of raw material, labor and other items entering into the manufacturing of piece goods has not yet been transmitted to the buying trade. Unless some wholly unlooked for development comes up to hold values at their present level sellers confidently believe that the record prices of today will be shattered. Some buyers who feel that the mill men have the correct idea of the outlook are endeavoring to place orders on heavyweights. They do not receive much encouragement.

Crude Rubber Prices Soften.

After a temporary stiffening, due to the activities of the German submarine off Nantucket, prices in the local market for crude rubber slumped off somewhat yesterday. Trading continued light, and there was nothing really to sustain prices at the levels they reached in the decline save the uncertainty concerning the U-boat's future doings. Up-river fine could be had yesterday at 74 cents a pound, spot, while for November-December delivery the quotation was 68½ cents. The wide margin was said to be due to the fact that only one boat carrying Brazilian rubber is scheduled to arrive here this month. Up-river coarse could be had at 44½ cents for spot shipment, while upper Caucho ball was held a cent higher. The spot quotations on plantation rubbers were 64 cents for first latex and 63 cents for smoked sheets.

Wide Range of Neckwear Styles.

Styles in women's neckwear are featured by their wide variety. Designs are by no means confined to a few types, but embrace all the variations from the flat variety to the high set effects. Materials, too, are quite comprehensive. The favorites at the moment are satin, Georgette crêpe and broadcloth. Silver and gold brocades are being utilized quite freely. Combinations of collars and jabots have proved quite popular.

Hard Coal Getting Very Scarce.

The Coal Trade Journal will say today that the anthracite shortage has reached a more acute stage than was expected to develop previous to the arrival of cold weather. Since the first of the month many retailers who had been holding off on paying premiums, in the hope of obtaining sufficient tonnage at circular to carry them along for a while, have evinced a willingness to pick up prompt lots wherever they could be had and pay the price demanded. This has been true of the New York City dealers as well as those along the New England coast and at all-rail points throughout the East, who were formerly the only ones paying premiums. After a long period of rapidly rising prices, the tidewater bituminous market began to show some signs of a reaction around the middle of last week.

Gray Goods Buying Improves.

In spite of the fact that more than one buyer and seller of gray goods was in Brooklyn yesterday attending the world's series dispute, there was better buying than on Monday, when there were only the activities of the U-53 to divert attention from the local market. While sheetings and other coarse goods did not move in any great volume, from all accounts, or did not show much in the way of feature, a large yardage of printcloths was disposed of at recent prices. Large sales of 39-inch 80 squares were made at 9½ cents for nearby delivery, while other good business was done on 38½-inch 64-60s and 60-48s, which sold, respectively, at 7¼ and 6¼ cents for nearby and contract deliveries. Closing prices were:

39-inch, 72-76s	9c	38½-inch, 65-56s	7c
39-inch, 68-72s	8¼c	38½-inch, 60-52s	6⅝c
39-inch, 56-44s	5¾c	38½-inch, 60-48s	6¼c
38½-inch, 64-64s	7½c	27-inch, 64-60s	4⅝c

THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Buyers for Private Dwellings—Big West Chelsea Deal—Harry Payne Whitney Sells at Wheatley Hills—Important Beekman Street Lease—Active Suburban Market.

Demand for private dwellings was one of the features of the realty market yesterday. In the upper east side section the four-story residence at 122 Sixty-first Street, on plot 18 by 100, between Park and Lexington Avenues, was sold by Mrs. Herman Gruntal, whose family has occupied the house for over fifty years. The buyer was Joel Rathbone Vice President of the National Surety Company. He will have the house extensively remodeled for his occupancy. Pease & Elliman were the brokers in the transaction. Mrs. Gruntal was represented by Harold Nathan as attorney.

The residence at 12 East Sixty-fourth Street, sold by the same brokers on the preceding day, was purchased by Mrs. H. Roswell Bates, daughter of the late James Talcott and widow of the Rev. H. R. Bates, former pastor of the Spring Street Presbyterian Church. Her present home is at 71 West Eleventh Street, but she will make the Sixty-fourth Street house her future residence.

On the west side the five-story dwelling at 320 West Seventy-eighth Street, on plot 18 by 100, between West End Avenue and Riverside Drive, was sold through Slawson & Hobbs for Frederick A. Ross. It was held at $35,000, and has been sold by the same brokers four times within the last three years.

West Chelsea Deal.

A large deal in the West Chelsea section was closed by C. M. Eadie of James N. Wells's Sons, who sold for the estate of Charles A. Christman the one-story garage at 541 to 551 West Twenty-fifth Street, on plot 125 by 100, just east of Eleventh Avenue. It has been purchased for investment.

Deal in Greenwich Village.

The three-story dwelling, 9 Commerce Street, one of a number in the Greenwich Village section that lost a portion of its frontage by the cutting through of Seventh Avenue, was sold to an investor for all cash yesterday by Charles B. Van Valen.

Buyers for Private Dwellings.

John M. Royall sold for Diedrick Meyer to Dora Weston Wheaton 208 West 137th Street, a three-story and basement brownstone dwelling on a lot 18 by 100.

Marcus Osk resold the three-story and basement dwelling at 319 East Thirty-third Street to a client of J. P. Finneran and P. J. Ryan.

Investors Buy Tenements.

George Dotz has purchased for investment from Adam H. Peters 10 and 12 Second Avenue, a five-story tenement occupying a triangular plot 34.8 by 65 by 101.8.

Weschler & Saffir have resold for Frederick Brown to a client for investment the five-story building at 156 Attorney Street, held at $35,000.

Bronx Sales.

The two recently completed five-story twenty-five family flats, occupying a plot 100 by 100 on Freeman Street near Jennings Street, have been sold by Phillip Herschowski.

The Avenue St. John and Fox Street Corporation sold an investor 1,506 Boston Road, a new five-story twenty-five-family flat on plot 50 by 100.

Brooklyn.

Martin A. Ansbro of 6,104 Fifth Avenue sold a two-family and store brick building on the west side of Seventh Avenue, 120 feet north of Sixty-second Street, for the Hal Building Corporation.

Ross & Gretsinger sold for the Boyd Realty Company two six-family apartments on the north side of Senator Street, west of Third Avenue, to an investor.

Harry Payne Whitney Sells Wheatley Hills Acreage.

The property lies along the East Norwich Turnpike and diagonally across from Mr. Whitney's main estate. Cocks & Willets negotiated the sale.

Long Island.

Worthington Whitehouse, Inc., sold for the Whitney Realty Company a tract of eleven acres situated in Wheatley Hills and adjoining the estates of F. Ambrose Clark and Beekman Winthrop. This property also adjoins property reported sold last week by Henry Phipps Estates to the same buyer, who will improve as a country estate.

$55,000 Montclair (N. J.) Sale.

H. B. Walmsley of Manhattan has purchased the brick Colonial residence and sixty acres of ground on Prospect and Eagle Rock Avenues, Montclair, N. J. The property is opposite the Essex County Park reservation and lies north of the Montclair Golf Club. For years this farm was owned by the late O. D. Munn of the Scientific American. The property has been held at $55,000. F. M. Crawley & Bros. were the brokers in the transaction.

New, elegant, artistic English Thatched Roof Residence of eleven rooms and three baths, located on the most attractive actual water-front plot to be found near New York. FOR $25,000.
LOCATED OPPOSITE ORIENTA POINT, MAMARONECK, Westchester County.
Extra large living room of quartered oak, designed in Tudor Gothic, with rich ceiling of hewn timbers. 7 ft. wainscote with tapestry to ceiling, most artistic antique mantel with immense log fireplace. Room lighted by six wall brackets of handsome and exclusive design.
Sun parlor with rough stone walls and brick floor. Radiators in principal rooms are concealed under recessed window seats.
The three rooms above described are connected by large openings, affording an interior vista which for its uniqueness of design, convenience of arrangement and beauty of its coloring would be difficult to duplicate.
Adjoining the dining room and continuing this effect of spaciousness out into the open, is a large porch with brick floor and pergola roof, from which a magnificent view of Long Island and the Sound is to be had.
The same artistic idea is carried out on the second floor. It contains five master bedrooms and two baths.
Servants' quarters and bath.
Floor plans and photographs.

THE WEATHER

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—The tropical disturbance has apparently turned to the northward a short distance east of Porto Rico, the few late afternoon reports received having failed to indicate any development to the northwestward.

With the advance of the high pressure area from the West the weather has cleared generally in the Atlantic States after some light rains and generally fair and cool weather prevails east of the Rocky Mountains except in Florida and along the Gulf Coast.

Heavy to killing frost occurred Tuesday morning in the greater portion of the lake region.

Low pressure prevails over interior districts west of the Rockies, and there were local rains except in the North Pacific States.

Fair weather will continue Wednesday and Thursday east of the Mississippi River, with rising temperature in the upper lake region, the lower Ohio Valley, and Tennessee. It will continue cool Wednesday in the lower lake region and the Atlantic States, followed by rising temperature Thursday.

Frost warnings have been issued for all sections east of the Mississippi River except the south portions of the South Atlantic and Gulf districts.

SUIT CUTS ESTATE $70,000.

G. H. Robinson Asks Court to Make Him Administrator at Once.

George Hyatt Robinson, who acquired a reputation as a spender by selling a large part of his interest in estates which he would eventually inherit, asked Surrogate Fowler yesterday to permit him to prove at once that he was competent to act as sole administrator of the estate of his aunt, Miss Augusta Hyatt, who died in an asylum in 1912, leaving an estate of about $200,000 to the petitioner.

Robinson, through his attorney, said that a proceeding to determine his fitness to act as administrator on the ground that he was the sole next of kin was started four years ago and was still going on, although it had cost about $70,000 in fees for referees, attorneys, stenographers and for miscellaneous disbursements and had reduced the estate to about $133,000. It is still undecided.

The petitioner, who went through bankruptcy several years ago, asserted that he was without funds, his wife was ill, and he had been obliged to borrow money to pay for food and lodging. The Surrogate reserved decision.

Shackleton Starts for Ross Sea.

SANTIAGO, Chile, Oct. 10.—Sir Ernest Shackleton, the antarctic explorer, returned to Valparaiso today from Buenos Aires. From Valparaiso he will go to Panama on his way to Australia to take charge of an expedition for the rescue of ten members of his party at the Ross Sea base.

FIND MURDERED GIRL IN TENEMENT CELLAR

FRUIT STAND MEN ARRESTED

Police Send Clothing to Laboratory in Hope of Finding Evidence of Prisoners' Guilt.

Groping his way in the dim cellar of the tenement at 184 Monroe Street early yesterday morning, Morris Silverstein, the janitor, stumbled over what he thought was a bundle of rags. Then he lighted a match and caught a glimpse of the white face of a dead child. He ran for the police, and in ten minutes detectives from Headquarters, under Inspector Faurot, were at work.

Near an areaway at the rear of the tenement and not far from the stairway leading from the interior of the house to the basement the police found the body of an eleven-year-old girl. Her clothing was torn, and around her neck a narrow leather strap had been pulled tight. It was such a strap as a child might use to fasten a skate or hold school books. The buckle end was fastened about the throat. The other end had been cut half across with a knife and then pulled off. This piece the detectives found near the street entrance to the cellar and it has led to speculation as to whether the child was killed elsewhere and the body carried to the cellar.

Within an hour the child's identity had been established. She was Tillie Brown, daughter of Bernard Brown, a cooper living with his family at 2 Ridge Street, three blocks away.

Before evening two Italians, joint owners of a fruit stand at Monroe and Montgomery Streets, who used the cellar to store their goods, were under arrest at Headquarters on suspicion of murder. They are Vincenzo di Stefano of 38 Monroe Street and Giuseppi Montelone of 37 Monroe Street. Both are married. Stefano is 42 years old and is known as Jimmie. His partner is four years his junior.

Little Tillie was called "Chinkey" by her companions in the big public school at Monroe and Gouverneur Streets. She was not bright, and, though nearly 12 years old, was only one grade above the kindergarten and one below her six-year-old brother Isadore. She had been missing since Monday evening, and her mother, after a fruitless all-night search, had reported her absence to the police of the Madison Street Station.

Tillie was given to playing truant, and it was said at the school that she had not been there since Friday. On Monday her brother learned that instead of going to school his sister had been playing in the park near by. He told his parents, and when the two started for school after the noon recess Tillie was in charge of her little brother. He told his mother he had seen Tillie take her place in the line at the school, and then had hastened away to go to his own class. The girl did not enter school. She slipped out of the line after her brother's departure, and some of the children said that they saw "Chinkey" playing in the street when they went home.

Attention of the detectives was directed toward the stand keepers by Abraham Brieloff, an uncle of the child. He said that on Thursday last he saw Tillie eating fruit. He asked her where she got it, and she replied that "that man"—indicating with her head the fruit stand at the corner—had treated her. The uncle asked whether "the man" had ever attempted any familiarities, and she replied that he had not.

The first thing Inspector Faurot did after the two prisoners had been brought in was to take from them every article of clothing they wore. These garments are at the city's central laboratory in Worth Street, where a careful examination is being made. The police expect to build up their case in the laboratory. Last night Drs. Otto, Kiein, and Pacini were still prosecuting their investigations. The blades of the pocket knives taken from the standkeepers are to undergo a microscopic examination to discover whether any particles of leather adhered to them.

The two prisoners are short, stocky men who took their arrest and long questioning with outward indifference. They used, the police say, as an occasional sleeping place quarters back of their storage space in the cellar at 184 Monroe Street. The detectives made a careful search of these quarters and several articles found there were sent to the laboratory. In a money belt they say they found five notes scrawled in a childish handwriting and addressed to "Jimmie" These are unprintable. Since the arrests three girls have come forward to testify that the prisoners gave them fruit and asked them to come into the cellar.

A Russian, who gave his name as Morris Berman, no home, was arrested last night in Seward Park. The police said he had been seen several times lately near the house in which the child was found. Berman would tell nothing about himself except that he came here from Russia six years ago. He talked incoherently at times.

An open letter to

Boies Penrose
U. S. Senator from Pennsylvania

Dear Senator:

YOUR distinguished activities as Leader of the Old Guard, the Guiding Spirit of the Republican Organization, Chief Exponent of the Tariff and the aggressive and resourceful General of the Republicans in the United States Senate, make you one of the Big Men of America and neccessarily deeply interested in the things that closely concern the People.

IN view of these facts—for they are facts—and you are a Big Man—and you do believe in the comfort and happiness of the people, don't you think that a company which produces a cigarette of superb purity and offers it for sale at the lowest price ever asked for a cigarette of its grade, has scored a Quality Achievement and an Economic Triumph? In view of the fact that the people of this country annually expend $120,000,000 for cigarettes, isn't the American Tobacco Company entitled to great credit for making a cigarette that maintains a fine standard and forces down the cost to the consumer?

ALL this is represented in the LORD SALISBURY Cigarette, Senator, and I am proud to inform you that the is the only 100 per cent. pure all-Turkish-Tobacco Cigarette in the world today that sells for as low a price as 15c for 20.

If you smoke cigarettes, Senator, try this one on my recommendation and in doing so you are making an experiment for the American people.

Very sincerely yours,

W. K. Cochrane
